No Jelly Inside This Box

From the outside, it looked like an ordinary jelly box. Inside were 56 crisp King George 1817 $20 bills.

Lucky receiver was the Salvation Army, which got the $1,120 parcel in its mail Monday.

A return address on the parcel had been scrubbed out, Brig. Ronald Frewing said Tuesday.

The Army doesn't know who the donor was. Police are checking to make absolutely sure the money isn't a relic of some past crime.

The money is still legal currency, and will go toward the Army's Red Shield campaign once it has been checked out.

Hopes Fade For 13 On Fishboat

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The owners of the Newfoundland fishing vessel Blue Mist II said Tuesday night they had abandoned all hope for the safety of the vessel and her crew of 13.

A spokesman for Bonavista Cold Storage Ltd., of St. John's, said the company was convinced the vessel had gone down Friday night with 200,000 pounds of fish in her holds.

The spokesman did not elaborate.

SEARCH CONTINUES

An Air-Sea Rescue Centre spokesman here said five aircraft were in the search Tuesday and six or seven would be pressed into the hunt at dawn today.

Meantime, the coast guard ships John A. Macdonald and the Montcalm, the fisheries vessel Cape Freelan and Bonavista's trawler Grand Monarch moved to the area, 50 miles off Newfoundland's southwest coast where the lifeboats were spotted.

Defence May Sound Retreat by '69

The Great Albatross Hunt

By RON COLLISTER
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The government may kill four albatrosses in one big retreat in defence. If the plan works out, it will:

● End Canada's air role in Europe by 1969.

● Take out of the front line the Starfighter nuclear strike plane, which is now considered a "suicide plane" in some European countries.

● Head off the confrontation with French President de Gaulle, due in 1969, over who will command foreign units in France under NATO.

● Put Canada clearly on the road to becoming a non-nuclear nation.

Because it is such a huge, all-encompassing plan, it is called just a possibility in official circles here. But it has everything going for it.

At present, Canada has six squadrons in Germany and two in France. The German squadrons are being converted to conventional as well as the nuclear role.

The French squadrons already have a purely reconnaissance role.

The plane is an albatross for the defence department. It was the ideal plane in the first place. But as the project moved along, it was difficult to dump the plane, which was accepted with modifications.

So much money was invested in the project. About $600-

000,000 for the planes, trainers and salaries.

And about a billion dollars to equip it for the whole nuclear strike role, including lengthened runways, nuclear warheads and security.

With such an investment,

the program continued, but it was considered an odd role for Canada.

As one reliable source here put it:

"No one liked the role that Canada picked up with the Starfighter.

"It is a role that equipped us to throw big nuclear bombs behind the Iron Curtain."

"But why?" U.S. Defence Secretary McNamara says the U.S. has 5,000 tactical nuclear weapons in Europe, and that doesn't include Polaris, Minutemen and Strategic Air Command warheads and bombs.

Canada started with 200 of Vancouver May Tap Satellite

VANCOUVER (CP)—Three University of British Columbia science students and a federal government biologist hope to convert sound signals from a U.S. satellite into pictures that will help forecast B.C.'s weather.

They have built an antenna and a receiving set in a former Royal Canadian Air Force building at Vancouver airport, and they hope to receive signals from the U.S. weather satellite Easa II, to be launched Friday.

The sounds will be fed into a facsimile machine which will produce a weather picture every three minutes.

Working on the project are students David Simon, Donald Jathar and Peter Kujik, and biologist Bryan Frazer.

"We hope to get pictures from an altitude of 200 miles," Mr. Frazer said.

The pictures will show cloud formation and other data over an area 2,000 miles long and nearly 1,000 miles wide.

Reds Rocket Dogs in Orbit

President, Premier Ousted in Syria

Wilson in Moscow

Russians Buying Peace Proposals

MOSCOW (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson was reported to have urged Soviet leaders Tuesday to help keep the Middle East peaceful and end the Viet Nam War. British informants said they saw signs of a Kremlin willingness.

In a secret session, the informants said, the British leader advised Soviet Premier Kosygin of his government's decision to withdraw from the Aden base in South Arabia by 1968.

Some countries, Wilson was reported to have suggested, might feel tempted to move into the power vacuum that could develop but it is a shared British-Soviet interest to preserve stability in the area.

This led Wilson to propose establishment of a nuclear-free zone in the Middle East by the big powers, the British sources said.

The underlying implication of Wilson's reported statement was clear.

He was asking the Russians themselves not to take advantage of Britain's withdrawal from Aden but instead to join in using the event as a trial of East-West co-operation in peacekeeping.

On Viet Nam, Wilson was said to have expressed his conviction in the sincerity of U.S. President Johnson's declared wish for peace and warned that continued fighting could turn first into an Asian land war involving China, then a world war.

Kosygin's reaction to Wilson's peace plea on Viet Nam was, on the surface, both orthodox and negative, the sources said.

Obote

Power in Uganda All in One Hand

KAMPALA (AP)—Prime Minister Milton Obote announced Tuesday he has assumed "all the powers of the government of Uganda" and arrested five members of his cabinet.

He said from now on he will rule with advice from a council "whose members I shall name later."

The prime minister, 42, said he acted independently and for "the wishes of the people of this country for peace, order and prosperity."

Obote said the five ministers had been "put under detention pending an investigation into their activities."

Reports said the ministers were arrested by a special police paramilitary unit and identified them as Minister of State Grace Bheingira; B. K. Kitya, minister of water and mineral resources; Health Minister E. B. S. Lumu; Agriculture Minister M. M. Ngobi, and George Magezi, housing and labor minister.

Atomic About-Face Scored

OTTAWA (CP)—Claiming that he wants to "keep the record straight," Opposition Leader Diefenbaker blasted Defence Minister Hellyer in the Commons Tuesday for changing his mind on nuclear weapons after the United States urged their adoption.

The opposition leader, speaking for the first time during debate of 1965-66 defence spending estimates, said Mr. Hellyer had set himself up as the one man able to see what Canada needs for defence. (See also Page 7).

Because of this, Mr. Diefenbaker said, "a review of some of the statements he made in the past . . . would not be remiss, because he was just as certain then as he is now."

PRE-ELECTION STAND

Mr. Diefenbaker then proceeded to read portions of Mr. Hellyer's Commons statements made before the 1963 election that saw the Conservative government defeated. Much of the campaign was fought on the nuclear arms issue.

Mr. Hellyer had condemned in 1961 acquisition of the Bomarc nuclear anti-aircraft missile and the Voodoo jet interceptor, Mr. Diefenbaker said. Then he quoted from a Feb. 4, 1963, Commons debate in which Mr. Hellyer said: " . . . As of this date I have changed my mind."

He referred to newspaper columns telling of how the U.S. ambassador to Canada had briefed reporters on the American view that Canada should accept nuclear weapons under the North American Air Defence Agreement.

"DENY"

"I wonder whether the minister was not one of those students who received the inoculation that brought about the change of viewpoint and heart. I ask him to deny that and say he was not in touch with Mr. (Livingston) Merchant, the United States ambassador.

"He has every opportunity to deny it now, but there will be no denial."

Mr. Hellyer rose and denied the statement.

"I am pointing out the fact that it is a singular circumstance that the minister turned a complete flop from one stand he had spoken of for a period of years and suddenly changed over just at the time the American ambassador was giving Canada the hypodermic treatment on Canada's policy," Mr. Diefenbaker shot back.

Mr. Diefenbaker then read from newspaper articles in April of 1963 in the French-language publication Cite Libre. He said they were written by "the parliamentary secretary to the prime minister" — an obvious reference to Pierre Elliott Trudeau (L — Montreal Mount Royal), a new guard Liberal elected last November.

From an article on the 1963 defeat of the Conservative government Mr. Diefenbaker quoted:

"The helping hand came from the Pentagon and demanded that Mr. (Prime Minister) Pearson betray his party program, along with the idealism with which he was identified. Funds were plentiful."

The article referred to a "decline of Canadian political thinking." Mr. Diefenbaker said, and suggested Mr. Hellyer explain the change in his thought processes.

Cuts in Royal Navy Trigger Broadside

LONDON (CP)—Defence Minister Denis Healey triggered the biggest blowup since Labor came to power when he announced Tuesday a reduced role for the Royal Navy in Britain's future defence.

Election talk flew after Healey told the Commons of the Socialist government's decision for purchase of United States warplanes and against construction of a new aircraft carrier.

Admiral Sir David Luce, 60, first sea lord, announced his "early retirement" — tantamount to resignation—following the steps of Navy Minister Christopher Mayhew, 50, who resigned Saturday. A defence department spokesman said there was no known precedent to Sir David's action and certainly none in this century.

Mayhew, in a personal statement to the House, declared that "proposed cuts in resources are not matched by proposed cuts in commitments."

"And the result will be a strain on the armed forces or dependence on the United States beyond what this House should accept."

This was music in the ears of Tory Opposition Leader Edward Heath, who scoffed at Healey's statement that his defence white paper, which followed a 14-month review, was "essentially an exercise in political and military realism."

"What you are doing is to reduce the amount of the gross national product spent on defence which . . . does not consider the defence of this country or its position in the world," said Heath.

The purchase of 50 U.S. F-111s was described by the government as a stop-gap measure until a new English-French

Tramp, Tramp, Tramp of Little Feet

OTTAWA (CP)—The case of the pre-teen soldiers was explained to the Commons Tuesday by Defence Minister Hellyer.

"They enrolled under age," he told a gaping opposition.

The defence minister gave the names of six servicemen who, he said, were all under 13 when they joined between 1926 and 1933.

The question came up during debate on the defence estimates as a result of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's recent report.

Mr. Henderson said the six servicemen retired last year with records that indicated they were 9, 11 or 12 when they joined.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC, Royal) suggested this couldn't be true.

Mr. Hellyer said the minimum enlistment age when they joined was 13 and they had "enrolled under age."

"Like my honorable friend and myself, they must have been big boys," he told Mr. Fairweather. "These people did serve and are entitled to benefits under the law."

Mr. Fairweather said that "as one who enrolled at 17"

he could understand this. But a husky nine-year-old?

Mr. Hellyer identified the six servicemen as Wing Cmdr. W. G. Taylor, Flt. Sgt. J. C. Baker, Lt.-Col. W. M. Alton, Maj. R. W. Hampton, Sgt. D. O. Hogkisson and Flt. Sgt. C. F. Page. He did not mention their home towns.

Mr. Hellyer said four of the men were approaching their 13th year when they enlisted and one was "almost 10."

Mr. Hellyer asked whether all six couldn't be brought before the house committee on defence, expected to sit shortly, to go into detail on their experience.

Admitted Strangler Given Life Sentence

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—A jury Tuesday night found confessed strangler James C. Cross Jr. guilty of murdering University of Texas coed Susan Rigby and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

The jury deliberated one hour over Cross' sentence after deciding earlier in the evening that he was guilty of the crime and that he was sane.

Cross, who had remained stoically silent during the trial, broke into a large grin when the sentencing was announced. He shook his head as if to indicate great relief.

SHAKES HANDS

Cross, who admitted he strangled Miss Rigby and her college roommate Shirley Ann Stark last summer, shook hands with his lawyers, and then was taken immediately above the courtroom to the county jail.

Lawyers for Cross, as they had hoped to do if their client was sentenced to life in prison, said they would not appeal the verdict.

District Judge Mace Thurman ordered Cross to begin serving his term at the Huntsville State Prison as soon as possible.

DEFENSE District Attorney Tom Blackwell, who early in the trial had said he would demand the death penalty for Cross, made only a half-hearted appeal for the death penalty during the final arguments.

In his climactic summation to the jury, Blackwell said "The facts testify and demand the death penalty," but that life in prison would "be acceptable" if the jurors felt there were mitigating circumstances.

Defense lawyer Charles Burton said the life sentence was what both Cross and his parents had hoped for.

MOTHERS OUT Cross' mother, who had stayed with her son during the trial, said she was not feeling well, and retired from the courtroom before the verdict was read. His father, however, was present.

Under the newly-passed Texas criminal code, the jury first decided if Cross was guilty or not guilty, and then heard a "presentencing hearing" before deciding his fate.

The 11-man, one-woman jury first deliberated two and one-half hours before deciding Cross was guilty and was sane. Then they heard four character witnesses testifying in behalf of Cross and listening to the final arguments from the prosecution and defense.

'Give Support To Avoid 1966 Election'

Trade Minister Lofmark warned the opposition Tuesday, in the legislature against further "obstruction," because such moves could become election issues.

He said there is "real concern" among the opposition that there will be an election this year.

"If you want to avoid an election," he told them, "begin supporting this government's policies."

Mr. Lofmark said the federal government should foster the building-up of a merchant fleet instead of curtailing the shipping industry.

Such curtailment also shackled the exporting industries of Canada, he said.

"Such a fleet is the long arm that renders a country able to reach into markets of the world," he said.

'SHACKLE' He said it doesn't make sense that Canada should abandon shipbuilding — such a policy is the "largest shackle on Canadian international trade."

He repeated his call for equalized harbor charges in Vancouver to put the West Coast port on an equal basis in competing with those in Eastern Canada.

He did not agree with a federal "discriminatory" policy toward the Vancouver harbor that made shipping $2,000 to $4,000 more costly than in other ports.

COMPLAINTS JUSTIFIED Arvid Lundell (SC, Revelstoke) told the House that he believes some complaints are justified from people being displaced in his riding by development on the Columbia River.

He said many people accepted B.C. Hydro and Power Authority offers for their land with "reluctance" but were unhappy in their hearts.

Anti-Red To Send More Tapes

NEW YORK (AP) — A 27-year-old psychologist, who describes himself as a "patriotic anti-communist," said Tuesday that he will continue sending tape recordings to radio Hanoi advising U.S. soldiers in Viet Nam to "disassociate themselves from the illegal war."

Ronald Ramsey said the broadcasts urge U.S. troops to re-examine their position in a war he says violates the articles of the Geneva conference.

Ramsey said he made two tapes Monday and they will be sent to Hanoi despite U.S. government objections.

Your Good Health

Continued Use Gives Answer To Queries on Use of Pill

By JOSEPH MOLNER, M.D.
Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking birth control pills for three years. I have been told that I should have discontinued them for four months after taking them for two years, and then should have started over again.

What's your advice? — MRS. J. G.

When the pills were first coming into extensive use, some additional precautions were being taken, such as discontinuing them for a time after two years. One of the questions then was whether, after prolonged use, ovulation (and hence the ability to have children) would resume when the pills were stopped.

Now we know the answer to that. Even after prolonged use, ovulation DOES return to normal. The only way to find the answer to a question like that was to wait and see.

NO NEED TO STOP
By now, use of the birth control pills has continued long enough so we know that there is no need to stop after two years. If you are tolerating the pills satisfactorily, I see no reason for interrupting use of them until you so desire.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you have a diet for stomach ulcers? I also have hemorrhoids.

MRS. W. A.

The way to correct ulcers involves more than just diet, although diet is important, too. And you certainly have my sympathy since you have both ulcers and hemorrhoids. Still, when you understand what these ailments are, and how to handle them, you can almost always get them under control. Maybe not absolutely always, but most of the time.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a daughter, 33, who gets weak spells and shakes, and the only thing that helps her is to eat sugar cubes or candy. She has spoken to a doctor about this but has never been given any medication.

Do you have any idea what could cause this? Should she have blood tests? I am apprehensive. — MRS. M. M.

Yes, I have an idea, but I don't know whether it is right, and can't possibly know without benefit of other information.

The difficulty could be hypoglycemia, or low blood sugar, which can be roughly described as the opposite of diabetes.

NOT UNCOMMON

This is not an especially uncommon problem, especially in people who tend to be nervous and high-strung. Possibly the doctor gave her a special diet. Medication is not always necessary for this. Your apprehension is understandable.

But I also think your daughter will be much more comfortable if she has a thorough analysis of her trouble, and a series of blood sugar tests (one form of blood test) would be most enlightening.

J. O. W. "Primipara" indicates first or firstborn — as a woman who is having her first baby. A technical term. So you can stop worrying. That's all the word means.

Nuclear Policy Assailed

He then read a recent column by Charles Lynch, head of Southern News Services, that said Mr. Merchant, then U.S. ambassador to Canada, had called members of the press corps to a briefing early in 1963 and urged adoption of nuclear weapons by Canada.

After this meeting, said Mr. Diefenbaker, Mr. Hellyer changed his mind on a non-nuclear role for Canada.

"Suddenly he turned over just when the American ambassador was giving the hypodermic to Canada,"

Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) said Mr. Hellyer's suggestion that previous defence ministers had been rubber stamps, indicated that senior defence advisers dominated them.

Did the minister mean he was going to reject the advice of these men when he said he was not going to be a rubber stamp minister? Or was he implying that the advisers, many of them still in the civil service, had given bad advice?

Instead of attacking previous ministers, Mr. Hellyer should give the Commons the information that he seeks. Opposition

EXPLANATIONS

Mr. Hellyer was asking Parliament to commit itself to a large defence expenditure — a new one in such respects as the CF-5 fighter-bomber and the destroyer escort program. Mr. Lambert said he wanted an explanation of these matters and "not just glorious generalities."

Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto Greenwood) wanted to know what commitments Canada had made at the recent NATO meeting. What progress had been made in phasing Canada out of a nuclear role as promised? Was Canada committed to continue its strike reconnaissance force and if so, for how long?

Mr. Hellyer replied that Canada's NATO role is unchanged for 1966.

MILITIA PLEA

Douglas Alkenbrack (CP — Prince Edward-Lennox) protested against the closing of armories and abandonment of some volunteer units.

It was the militia units which fought the wars, he said. The role of the permanent forces was to train these units for fighting.

Bechuanaland Breaks Away

LONDON (UPI) — Bechuanaland will become an independent republic called Botswana on Sept. 30 under an agreement signed Monday night by Colonial Secretary Lord Longford and Bechuanaland Prime Minister Seretse Khama.

South Africa will then have for the first time an independent black African state on its borders.

Five Survive Avalanche

AIROLD, Switzerland (Reuters) — Five men clearing snow at a hydroelectric installation near here were buried by an avalanche but rescuers pulled them out alive.

Mac-Powell Plans Appeal

VANCOUVER — MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Limited announced Tuesday it will appeal a Supreme Court decision regarding a company appeal against a provincial sales tax assessment.

The company protested an assessment of $3,541,000 tax on 39,000 acres of some 139,000 acres that were purchased from the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway in 1964.

Retreat Due?

the Starfighters, but 31 have crashed.

West German pilots, who also fly the Starfighter, have called it the "suicide plane" because of the high rate of crash.

At the present rate of attrition, Canada would have to withdraw from the Starfighter role by 1972.

But experts now speculate that it would be better all round if this was brought forward to 1969.

The planes that were left could either be sold to European countries requiring replacements or brought home to Canada and modified for an air defence role.

This idea appeals to those who have to save money in defence.

It would be a clear saving of $100,000,000 a year.

This would make more money available for Canada's new role of peace-keeping.

The big political arguments in favor of this solution are these:

French President de Gaulle has warned that NATO units in Europe must come under French command.

This problem would be avoided by the removal of the Canadian squadrons in France.

Prime Minister Pearson, probably before the next general election, would be able to produce evidence that he's scrapping the nuclear-strike planes and keeping his promise to dump nuclear weapons.

The arguments are so impressive that the conclusion seems inevitable.

U.S. Labor Pledges Fight

By HARRY BERNSTEIN
The Los Angeles Times

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Organized labor Tuesday began stepping up its pressure on the Johnson administration by flexing its political muscles in an effort to win Congressional approval for a minimum wage increase and other measures.

AFL-CIO president George Meany said he understands that President Johnson wants "a very, very small increase in the minimum wage," and added: "We in labor will fight for what we believe is good for the economy and for the nation."

NO PARTY
Asked if this would put labor in opposition to the administration, Meany said labor "can do without the Democrats or the Republicans. I do not buy the idea that we have no place else to go."

Unions are going to be selective and "choosy" about where they spend their political efforts and money, he said, and "we do not have to toady behind any political party."

"We do not have to depend on political handouts. We can make our own way..."

POLITICS
The AFL-CIO leader made his acid comments after the second day of conferences among the 29 members of the labor federation's executive council and the labor strategy seemed clear as summarized by Walter Reuther in his remarks to the closed-door session.

"We are just going to have to use our bargaining talents in the field of politics as well as at the bargaining table with management."

Unions sources here repeatedly told reporters that in the bargaining with the Johnson administration for higher minimum wages, labor must not only bargain in the traditional sense of setting an ideal goal and then perhaps compromising, but it must also use tactics comparable to the strike weapons in the field of economic bargaining with management.

'EXAMPLES'
This means, in political terms, the singling out of one or more Democratic party candidates who in the past may have received labor support, to be "examples" of the kind of political pressure labor can apply.

In addition to minimum wages, organized labor is also pressing for changes in the unemployment insurance system and union leaders have adopted a lengthy statement dealing with their proposals on this issue.

It should be noted, however, that in their statement they recognized that the unions themselves are calling for national jobless insurance standards "along the lines recommended by President Johnson."

NEGROES
The AFL-CIO leaders also pledged their full cooperation and $10,000 a year to a plan put before them by the National Urban League executive director, Whitney M. Young, Jr.

Young said his organization is planning to set up in about 50 cities local committees to bring more Negroes into skilled jobs, especially in the field of construction.

FRUSTRATION
There is no question that the union leaders here are voicing a general feeling of frustration. They want to make it clear somehow that the Democrats can expect pressure from labor for more liberal legislation to offset the pressure from business and industry.

The real target of the labor leader's bitterness, however, is still the Republican leadership, especially in the Senate.

If I Were Queen

I'd Sit and Read My Book on Rabbits

LONDON (UPI) — The Daily Mirror, which is running a literary competition for children, today printed eight-year-old Veronica Simmonds' daydream on what she would do "If I were Queen."

"I would get up at nine o'clock in the morning after breakfasting in bed," she wrote.

"I would dress in my long palace gown and put on my crown. I would then telephone the prime minister and ask him how England was getting on. I would give him my advice and orders."

"This would keep me busy until lunch time. Lunch would consist mostly of fish and chips and bread and butter with tomato ketchup."

"After lunch I would set on my throne and read my book on rabbits. When tea was over I would change my crown for a different one. I would set on my throne again and read until dinner time. I would have salad with garlic and red wine for dinner."

"Later I would get my servants to prepare my bed and to put in a hot water bottle. I would watch the television for a little while and then I would go to bed after the palace chaplain had said prayers."

Lapointe Takes Oath To Succeed Comtois

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Hugues Lapointe, formerly agent-general of Quebec in London, was sworn in as Quebec's new lieutenant-governor Tuesday night in a brief ceremony in the cabinet chamber at the Quebec legislature.

Lapointe, who arrived from London late Tuesday afternoon, was sworn in by Mr. Justice Lucien Tremblay, judge-in-chief of the Quebec Court of Appeals.

Only a few of the more important members of the Quebec cabinet attended the ceremony, along with Col. J. P. Martin, aide-de-camp to Paul Comtois, Lapointe's predecessor.

CLOSED CASNET
Meanwhile the closed casnet containing Comtois' body continued to lie in state in the Red Chamber of the Quebec legislative council, transformed into a chapel-ardente for the occasion.

Members of the Quebec Fire Commission and provincial police were still searching the ruins of 104-year-old Bois de Coulonge, official residence of

Lapointe

Quebec's lieutenant-governors for the past 99 years, for clues to the cause of the savage fire which razed it to the ground in the early morning hours of Monday.

Marcel Vlieminkx, personal attaché to Justice Minister Claude Wagner, said earlier the results of the investigation will not be made known before a coroner's inquest is held.

Citizens filed silently by the closed casnet in the Red Chamber, filled with floral tributes from the Quebec, Canadian, French and other governments, companies and friends. Queen Elizabeth sent a large chrysanthemum wreath.

The doors of the legislative assembly were closed, following the brief afternoon sitting during which Premier Jean Lesage and opposition leader Daniel Johnson both offered their formal sympathies to Mrs. Comtois and her five children.

Following the brief sitting, Johnson, by then informed of Lieut-Gov. Lapointe's appointment, commented:

"I hope he will be the last lieutenant-governor of Quebec."

MP, VETERAN
Lapointe, whose appointment was just announced Tuesday morning in Ottawa, is a 54-year-old lawyer and son of Ernest Lapointe, who served as justice minister in the Mackenzie King cabinet.

A veteran of the Second World War, he served as federal member of the House of Commons, parliamentary assistant to the minister of defence and the secretary of state for foreign affairs.

He was named agent-general to London in 1961.

Fatal Fire 'Warrants' Investigation

OTTAWA (UPI)—Prime Minister Pearson said Tuesday the "circumstances" of the fire that early Monday took the life of Quebec Lieutenant-Governor Paul Comtois "seem to warrant an investigation."

Pearson told the Commons he had already talked to Premier Jean Lesage about the origin of the fire that razed the stately Quebec City governor's mansion and "he is going to report to me in greater detail."

New Democratic leader T. C. Douglas said the fire should make Canadians aware of the tragic toll taken by fire and that something should be done to tighten fire regulations.

Federal officials said investigation of the fire itself came under provincial jurisdiction and the federal Royal Canadian Mounted Police would come into it only if requested. No such request had been made.

Floodwaters Hit Argentina

FORMOSA, Argentina (UPI) — A state of emergency has been proclaimed today in Formosa province, where mounting floodwaters fed by torrential rains imperiled more than 40,000 persons.

The provincial government appealed to Buenos Aires for helicopters and emergency supplies of snakebite serum and tetanus anti-toxin.

'Amateurs Using Car Safety' To Make News

REGINA (CP) — The president of Chrysler Corp. of Canada Wednesday criticized the "present rash of loud-mouthed amateurs who are sounding off about car safety."

Ron W. Todgham of Toronto told a service club the car industry has pressed for years for car safety but "amateurs" now are using it as a springboard to get their names in the news.

"Who had heard of Howard Grafty, Conservative MP from Bromie-Missisquoi, Que., until he began his attack on automobiles several months ago?"

"If he was a bona fide expert he wouldn't be saying some of the things he has been saying."

FILM CUT

And, Mr. Todgham said, good material for a TV program on car safety was "ignored or left on the cutting room floor because it didn't support the negative aim of the program."

He said the industry spends more than $500,000,000 a year on safety research. His own company had installed 46 safety features in cars in the last 20 years.

But public acceptance came slowly, he said. In 1949, one company installed seat belts in cars. "The public did not want them and some cut them out with scissors."

HUMAN FAILURE

"Now, all of a sudden, automobile safety has zoomed into the public's attention."

Mr. Todgham said human failure causes 90 per cent of highway accidents. He called for more driver training in schools, uniform traffic laws and signs and more comprehensive vehicle testing.

Chemicals Exploded

VANCOUVER (CP)—An army demolition expert successfully exploded a potentially-dangerous bottle of chemical located late Monday at the University of British Columbia, the fourth such bottle located there in three months.

The bottle of isopropyl ether was removed from the UBC biological science building by army captain Hub Weyers who took it to a remote part of the university and exploded it.

MPs Plan To Attend Funeral

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Tuesday he is sure a late start can be arranged for Thursday's Commons sitting to permit MPs to attend the funeral service at Quebec for Paul Comtois, Quebec lieutenant-governor.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker suggested the Thursday sitting start at 4:30 p.m. instead of the usual 3:30 p.m.

Better Treatment For Migraine Goal

LONDON (CP)—A research fund to seek better treatment methods for migraine headache has been launched in Britain by Lord Brain, the distinguished neurologist who attended Sir Winston Churchill at the statesman's last illness.

The aim is to raise a minimum of £75,000 ($225,000) annually in the next 10 years to support organized research into the causes and treatment of migraine, an agonizing, sometimes blinding, headache that recurs among sufferers.

One theory to be examined is that a fault in the nervous system at the base of the brain may be the cause of some migraines. Food allergies, eye trouble or hereditary factors might trigger off attacks, Lord Brain said.

Voice of Free France

GENERAL CHARLES DE GAULLE, the president of the French republic, has served notice on the allies of NATO that within three years they must remove from French soil the entire military representation of the organization—headquarters, troops and bases; the whole kit and caboodle. He left them an alternative: French command.

There are two perfectly sound reasons for the general's attitude: first, that the threat of attack from Russia against the West has so much diminished that the prime purpose of NATO, to discourage and resist such an event, no longer exists; second, that the time has come for France to reassert sovereignty over all military forces on French soil.

Both of these arguments have validity. Russia undoubtedly has shown a disposition towards closer co-operation with the West and is apparently sincere in her policy of co-existence. France, in recent years, has been leaning towards Moscow in an effort at improving the political stability of Europe. The tendency was not altogether unwelcome in London where a somewhat similar diplomacy can be observed.

As for the determination of France (and for France it would be realistic to read General de Gaulle) to insist upon control of military units within her borders, this is an understandable projection of national pride.

It is unlikely that the general has forgotten those days during the Second World War, when he was a voluntary exile in London, and the slights, imagined or otherwise, he suffered at the hands of his allies. He had a particular resentment against the United States. It was by his own adroitness and daring that he was present at the liberation of Paris and was able to establish his government there in the face of a determined challenge from the Communist Underground.

He will undoubtedly remember, too, with some pain, if not resentment, the American attitude at the time of the Suez crisis.

France now has her own nuclear strike capacity, and the general must feel it beneath the dignity of his people to take orders from military commanders, NATO or otherwise, on French soil.

But none of this means that General de Gaulle intends to abrogate the NATO agreement or even to withdraw from general commitments. He is not threatening the alliance.

Don Cook, writing from Paris put it very succinctly when he said: "The general seems to be aiming at a situation in which France will still be in NATO but NATO will no longer be in France."

Poor Substitute

THE LEGISLATIVE buildings are to be face-lifted, as the expression goes, and given what is termed a centennial look by the "decorative" addition of lengthy bands of plywood, flags and other tinsel trappings. By the recital of things to be added there is a decided clutter of impedimenta in prospect.

And if these mistaken gimmicks are to last through the better part of two years wind and weather will make of them tawdry and shabby exhibits disfiguring the natural facade of what is an example of a disappearing architectural expression.

One need only compare the legislative structure with the Douglas Building alongside to see where artistry in stone began in this area and where it left off.

A real face-lift, one that elsewhere is being carried out in places where ornate buildings are now regarded as something to be preserved, would be the cleaning of the stonework to restore it to the pristine freshness of its original state, something that Works Minister Chant promised a year or two back for the centenary. Apparently the promise was meaningless.

Even as things are the legislative buildings present an eye-catching appearance in an age which because of cost, time and modern materials invites the unsculptured upthrust of building cubes and boxes which lack the artistry of old-time artisans. There will never be another complex like "the Buildings," although happily the new museum-archives structure now arising is supposed to be of a facade that will at least blend and not offend, as does the Douglas Building, the uniformity of the parliamentary precincts.

One of the sights of Victoria, and a graceful attraction that enhances the virtues of the city, is the James Bay seat of government. It draws the admiration of visitors and, too, most Victorians themselves, and with nighttime bulbs outlining its overall design it presents a pleasing and arresting spectacle.

A pity indeed that a real face-lift for the centennial occasions is not to be carried out, with the stonework cleaned and flood-lighting to cast a new glow on what is now a historic structure. Plywood and bunting is a poor substitute.

Quebec Tragedy

AS WITH THE monarchy itself the vice-regal office must be kept in immediate continuity, and thus a new incumbent has been speedily appointed to succeed Lieutenant-Governor Paul Comtois, so unhappily a victim of the fire which on Monday razed the historic official residence of Quebec's first citizen.

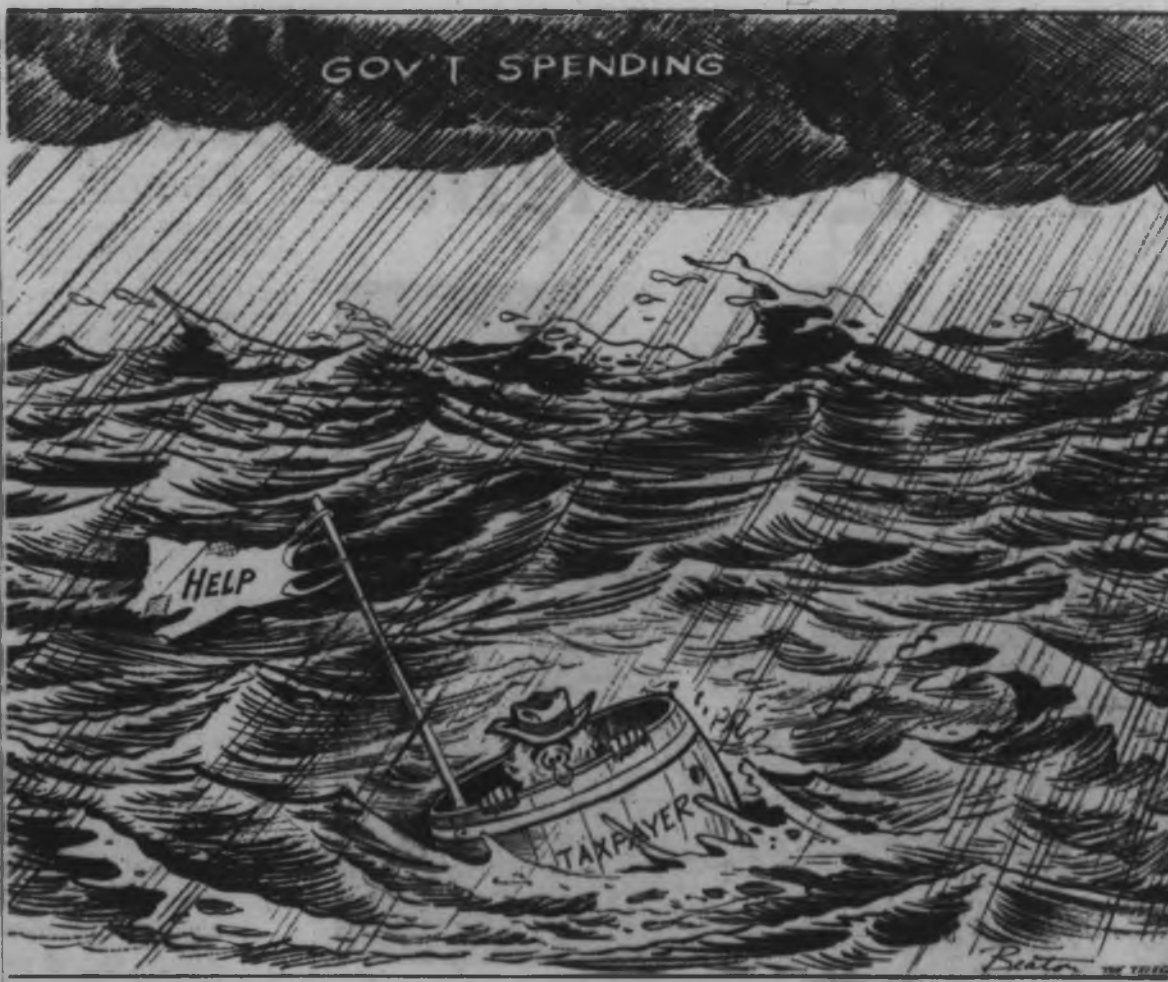

All Quebec is in mourning for this man of quality who was held in high esteem by his former colleagues in the House of Commons, where he sat as a member of the Diefenbaker cabinet before his elevation to vice-regal status. The nation as a whole will deeply regret the unfortunate circumstances of his death.

Mr. Comtois will be specially remembered here, also, for the courtesy and friendly welcome he extended to councillors of this area who were his guests last year as members of a UBCM delegation on a goodwill visit to Quebec City.

The funeral of the late lieutenant-governor will take place tomorrow morning, attended by Governor-General Vanier and amid condolences flowing to his family and the Quebec government from the sovereign he represented and from all quarters of this country.

In a real sense it may be said that Mr. Comtois died for his faith, for it was after ensuring the safety of his family and all others in the governmental mansion that he entered the residence's private chapel, presumably in an effort to retrieve some of the sacramental vessels. It was a sacrifice that cost him his life.

The sympathy of this province, both official and unofficial, goes out in widespread measure to his family and to his sister province in the tragedy that has overtaken the first citizen of Quebec.

Flood Season

Rarely in Full Accord

India's Divided Communists

By CYRIL DUNN from New Delhi

ARE the Communists of India moving toward a grand reunion, healing for a time, if not for ever, the wounds they inflicted upon each other almost two years ago in the great "battle of disruption and split?"

There were hints of it—shy and tentative gestures of forgiveness and goodwill—when the Right Communist Party of India met recently to celebrate the party's 40th anniversary. Communist choristers sang in praise of the Tashkent Declaration, the Soviet-sponsored peace agreement between India and Pakistan. There was, however, no rendering of that other proletarian ballad about matrimonial longevity in the East End of London which goes: "We've been together now for 40 years, and it don't seem a day too much."

For throughout their history the Indian Communists have rarely been in complete accord. Even in a country where all political parties, including the ruling Congress Party, have extreme difficulty in sticking together, the tendency among Indian Communists towards what they themselves call "splitism" has been outstanding. Indeed, the Rightists who gathered for that austere birthday party can no longer sustain any exclusive claim to leadership of the Communist Party of India. Ever since the Grand Schism of 1964 there has been another and quite separate CPI composed of Leftists.

If the breach is now to be repaired the reasons are plain and have little to do with the tender sentiments likely to have been stirred up by the 40th anniversary.

The next Indian general election is now less than a year away. It has been demonstrated—in the 1965 state election in Kerala—that when they fight openly against the militant Left, the Rightists can go down in humiliating defeat. Moreover, with India threatened as she is by widespread famine and unemployment, the opportunists will be unable to take full advantage of this situation if they stay rent in two.

To the layman, the basic cause of the split seems obvious. To him it appears that the Rightists are bent by their origins, traditions and long practice towards Moscow, while the Leftists lean at least towards the ideology and revolutionary strategy of Peking.

But most Indian Communists—notably and naturally the leaders of the Left—insist that this is not so. The Leftists say they have never endorsed the whole of the Chinese approach, and the Rightists assert that it is not they, but India's "capitalist press" that calls the Leftists "Peking Patriots."

The real differences as set out by the Communists themselves, with a wordiness which seems remarkable even in an area of political prose which is never been succinct—are of a much more complex nature.

In a highly unequal and unbalanced society, what the Leftists want for India seems to be a people's democracy, based on the coalition of all genuine anti-feudal and anti-imperialist forces, headed by the working class. This demands "first and foremost" the overthrow ("by peaceful means") of the present bourgeois-landlord Congress government, whose five-year plans have "nothing to do with socialist planning."

The Rightists, on the other hand, are bent on achieving a socialist transformation in India ("through peaceful means"). In pursuit of this they will seek to forge a National Democratic Front. This does not mean political co-operation with "the totality" of the Congress Party, but only with its socialist and radical elements.

At the 40th anniversary, doing some "rethinking" about their attitude to China. The opportunity for this rethinking has been provided by the Indian home minister, Mr. Gulzarilal Nanda, who has always shared the plain man's ideas of what the Left Communists were up to. For more than a year now he has held their leaders in jail as a pro-Chinese menace to the security of India.

While this arrangement, which could continue indefinitely, naturally puts pressure on the Left, it appears that Moscow itself is now leaning heavily on Indian Communists in general, and in the interests of reunion in particular. Clearly the Soviet Union must deplore this enduring split in India, which it relies upon to offset the pretensions of China in Asia.

At all events, it seems possible that Moscow has been working on an important Indian Left Communist who has just been there for an abdominal operation and cannot have been in good shape to resist blandishments, although Pravda has hotly denied that anything of the kind occurred.

Russian influence on the Indian Right Communists—taking this to be the surviving base of the original party—has been continuous for 40 years. It is again reckoned here to be highly significant that at the birthday party a Rightist leader felt impelled to proclaim himself "unaware" of any Soviet order to the Indian Communists to quit squabbling and get together again. But the same leader did add that it seemed a pity the Indian Communists were unable to presumeably self advantage of the immense prestige now enjoyed by the Soviet Union in India.

Today in History
By The Canadian Press
The siege of the Alamo in San Antonio, Texas, began 130 years ago today—in 1836—when about 180 Texans were attacked there by General Santa Anna's army of 4,000 men. Texas was then fighting for its independence from Mexico. The walls of the Alamo were breached after 13 days and hand-to-hand fighting followed. At the end of the battle only five Texans were left alive. They were killed in cold blood. The siege of the Alamo was a turning point in the Texas Revolution. It was the last stand of the Texan army against the Mexican forces. The battle was a decisive victory for the Mexicans. The Alamo was a symbol of the struggle for Texas independence. The battle was a turning point in the Texas Revolution. It was the last stand of the Texan army against the Mexican forces. The battle was a decisive victory for the Mexicans. The Alamo was a symbol of the struggle for Texas independence.

1820—The Cato Street Conspiracy was discovered in London.

1879—The first issue of Montreal La Patrie was published.

First World War: Fifty years ago today—in 1916—French units gave up Haumont on the Verdun front. German ships in the Tagus River, Portugal, were interned. Lord Robert Cecil became British trade minister.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941—London announced the sinking of seven Italian transport ships. Mussolini broadcast that German forces were reinforcing his defeated Libyan army; eight Italian aircraft were shot down over Eritrea.

THE authorities at the British Broadcasting still refuse to show or to sell Peter Watkins' film, "The War Game." This is very short-sighted of them, because having seen it at one of the private screenings, I suspect that it may be the most important film ever made.

We are always being told that works of art cannot change the course of history. Given wide enough dissemination, I believe this one might. It begins with maps, reminding us of Britain's unique vulnerability to nuclear attack. It then postulates a crisis. Chinese troops enter South Viet Nam; America threatens to use atomic weapons against them; Russia gives notice that she will take over West Berlin unless the weapons are withdrawn. Riots at Checkpoint Charlie provoke the Russians to move.

NATO divisions, pushing through East Germany to relieve the city, encounter overwhelmingly superior conventional forces, whereupon it is decided (in accordance with official NATO policy) to riposte with tactical nuclear weapons. Once these are launched, Russia strikes back with atomic missiles on Western Europe.

While the stakes are rising, we cut back to Britain; to evacuated mothers and children; to interviews with ordinary people, who tell the camera that in their opinion war is inevitable.

There's a sense that, in any case, the authorities will cope, as they did in the blitz. Then the sirens fall, and down come three minutes or 20 seconds later, depending on whether the source is a distant launching pad or a nearby nuclear submarine—comes the holocaust.

As in his TV reconstruction of the Battle of Culloden, Watkins confines most of his action to a small area, and the whole of his cast to non-actors. Here the place is Kent, a county that contains less than the average number of targets for annihilation.

What follows is a daytime nightmare, a guide to disaster so honestly documented as to rebuke any charge of sensationalism.

By KENNETH TYNAN from London

(Even in a relatively mild nuclear strike, such as the one presented in the film, between a third and a half of the population of Britain would be killed or seriously injured.)

Sequence after sequence inscribes itself on the memory. The firestorm near the point of impact; the trembling walls 40 miles away; the beleaguered doctor ("None of these people are falling apart"); the police dutifully shooting the hopelessly maimed; the bewildered husband incoherently wondering whether and when his family will die of radiation sickness; the civilian raid on military food supplies (a boy gestures obscenely at the prying camera); the raiders executed by firing-squad; and—perhaps the most chilling of all—the survivors staunchly insisting that Britain was right to retaliate in kind.

There are no close-ups of violence in progress, merely of its aftermath—the burned, the organically eroded, the merrily destroyed, the fortunate dead.

"The War Game" stirred me at a level deeper than panic or grief. So long as adequate warning is given to depressives and other victims of nervous illness, it should not only be in cinemas, not just here but everywhere on earth, especially in countries that possess (or would like to possess) the bomb.

In refusing to show it, the BBC is like a doctor withholding the truth from a patient who is suffering from a potentially fatal disease; silence may preclude panic, but it also precludes cure.

"The War Game" is more than a diagnosis; it is a work of art.

It precisely communicates one man's vision of disaster, and I cannot think that it is diminished as art because the vision happens to correspond with the facts. Like Michelangelo's Last Judgment, it proposes itself as an authentic documentary image of the wrath to come—though Michelangelo, of course, was working from data less capable of verification.

The film contains no resonant generalities about the nobility of man; instead, it shows us shattered, astonished specimens of a race that owed its preeminence to its adaptability, adapted itself too readily to an insane power structure, and so died. In Watkins' 50-minute masterpiece, our grave—if and when we are compelled to dig it—will have a living monument.

THE showing of "The War Game," Peter Watkins' remarkable television play, will make only two remarks.

One: although I've lived with the subject since the H-bomb was invented, I'm not at all sure that I can make sense of it.

Two: if I had been shown the film at its first public screening, I should have been struck by the effect of the film on the audience. I found the effect overwhelming; the strain close to unbearable.

Washington Calling

Lasting Endeavor

By MARQUEE CHILDS from Honolulu

FROM the long row of windows in Admiral U. S. G. Sharp's office the view is out over Pearl Harbor and the sunlit sweep of the Pacific. As commander-in-chief, Admiral Sharp presides over an empire of 15,000,000 square miles, with American forces in the three services approaching the 600,000 mark.

So massive is the commitment to this empire that the Viet Nam war is seen as only one phase, if at the moment the most critical phase, of the thrust of American power. For better or for worse, the die has been cast. To reverse the drive for an American future in the vast area of the Pacific seems impossible short of a nuclear encounter.

Parallels are always dubious, but the central effort today is to do in the Pacific what the United States did in the Atlantic. That is to shape a new alliance and, to use a piece of government shorthand, build an infrastructure that will sustain it.

This is the chief objective of Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey's current tour of Asia. It is first to wrestle up another 20,000 to 25,000 troops from America's Asian "allies" for the long pull it is to lay the groundwork for an alliance of broader scope and sterner purpose than the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

South Korea is expected to provide a second division of upwards of 20,000 men. Australia will contribute a second battalion and New Zealand may add a second small contingent. If present expectations are fulfilled, the Philippines will come through for the first time with 2,000 engineer-service troops. The Philippine military receives substantial American aid in fuel and other essentials.

There are times when both military and diplomatic officials talk as though Viet Nam were a lesson to be learned in the unending task of holding and consolidating the "free world" in the Pacific. They foresee that the next battleground may be Northeast Thailand and not so distant, either.

Following a meeting of commanders from all over the Pacific, which coincided with the Honolulu conference, a new kind of cautious hope colors the outlook for Viet Nam. For perhaps the first time, military men speaking privately believe they have all the elements in readiness to do the job. By 1967 the Viet Cong will begin to fade away, not by seeking negotiation at a peace table, which no one expects, but by acknowledging they cannot win.

At that point the guerrillas will spill over into Thailand through the Laos corridor, the route today of up to 80 per cent of the infiltration into South Viet Nam.

Added to this is the imbalance between public and private investments. Increasingly, development aid is coming exclusively from government funds, provided by those who carry only the burden of the operation without even the illusion of future benefits. True, bureaucratic circles insist that people usually do not know what happens with their money and consider taxation a natural catastrophe against which it would be useless to revolt. This nevertheless is not the case for relations between taxation and development aid. There is even a strong tendency to exaggerate the charges, since the area which invites the demagogue.

As we already mentioned in a previous column this reaction against financial and technical assistance is dangerous. We have reached the point where political and economic successes are likely. But, in order to continue, it is imperative that the program be made popular.

To this end it is important to encourage private investment because they could free the public sector of many heavy loads.

Capital only goes where an atmosphere of confidence prevails. For the businessman the most important thing is security, an objective juridical order which protects the citizen against arbitrary bureaucracy.

Here we touch an essential point of the contemporary evolution. In a number of countries the departure of the Europeans has led to the end of judicial independence and of the rule of law. Despotism has come back.

It should be noted that wherever this evolution has set in, private investments have ceased. If, in some states, large companies continue their services this is generally in exchange for a guarantee by their own government—which in the last analysis means indirect public development aid. On the other hand, in countries where a juridical order has been upheld—such as the Ivory Coast, Madagascar or Malaysia—private investments have developed and helped the remarkable prosperity of these states.

At a time when major governmental decisions are pending, one should not overlook this essential point. Civilization and rule by law always go hand in hand. A reorientation of aid towards countries which continue to respect a juridical order would bring positive results for both donors and beneficiaries.

White House, Kennedy Agree?

Dispute Over Viet Nam Perhaps Non-Existent

Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House stepped squarely into the middle of a Vietnamese peace policy controversy with Senator Robert F. Kennedy (Dem. N.Y.) Tuesday and said that perhaps there is no controversy after all.

The United States, the White House said, favors free elections in South Viet Nam "with all of us abiding by the consequences of these elections, whatever they may be."

Moreover, press secretary Bill D. Moyers said "there is no disagreement" between the Johnson administration and Kennedy "if Senator Kennedy did not propose a coalition government with Communist participation before elections are held."

House view following meetings by President Johnson with his top policy advisers on Viet Nam, including State Secretary Dean Rusk, Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara and McGeorge Bundy, special assistant for national security affairs, as well as special consultant Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor and State Under-Secretary George W. Ball.

Kennedy said Tuesday the issue of including Communists in an interim coalition government of South Viet Nam prior to elections should be decided at the peace negotiation table.

ELECTION FIRST
The senator said he is not adhering to the administration of the Viet Cong guerrillas and its political arm, the National Liberation Front, to any government that might be set up before elections are held.

Many Had Offers, Denis Trial Told

By KEN KELLY
OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Lamontagne testified in court here Tuesday that he, Raymond Denis and "the party" were offered, benefits in 1964 to help free narcotics smuggler Lucien Rivard on bail.

He said he immediately rejected a $20,000 offer relayed to him by Denis, then executive to the federal immigration minister, to drop opposition to bail for Rivard.

For a second time Mr. Lamontagne's testimony was interrupted for legal argument with the jury excluded. A similar procedure was followed for two days last week.

Mr. Lamontagne identified Denis as the man who informed him of the $20,000 offer. He said Denis also indicated at a July 14 meeting that he (Denis) would get something out of the affair.

naming only one of them—a person referred to as Gelin. He said that in addition to the $20,000 there was to be an undisclosed sum "for the party."

He quoted Denis as saying Rivard, now serving a 20-year prison term in the United States for narcotics offences, was always a good friend of "the party," had helped the party in the past and might be needed to help again in a future election.

Called to Ottawa
Mr. Lamontagne was testifying at Denis' trial on a charge of corruptly offering a sum of money to have Mr. Lamontagne drop opposition to bail for Rivard.

He testified that Denis called him to Ottawa July 14, 1964, and "said that I was being offered $20,000 to withdraw objections to Rivard's getting out on bail."

He said the offer was made in the parliamentary office of the immigration minister — then Rene Tremblay — after Mr. Tremblay had left the room. He and Denis then had gone to Mr. Lamontagne's hotel room where Denis again mentioned the offer.

over the testimony of a Texas witness, Nathaniel Allen, and Circuit Judge George Schulz rapping for order.

After leaving the witness stand, Allen was seen crying in the judge's chambers, with Candace Mossler holding one of his arms and her nephew, Melvin Lane Powers, holding the other. Powers and Mrs. Mossler are on trial in the slaying of her husband.

Allen, a handyman employed on Mossler's Galveston ranch in 1962, testified that the 69-year-old financier came to the ranch one day with three young, "fancy-talking" men and asked him to saddle horses for the group.

Allen said he got the horses ready, waited more than two hours for the men to come out, then knocked on the door of Mossler's trailer house. He said Mossler came to the door clad only in an undershirt and naked below the waist.

Powers offer
Allen also testified that Edward Bart Diehl visited his house about six weeks ago and told him: "I'm in trouble. I do need at the trial and you can help me if you want to."

Allen testified that Diehl asked him to come to Miami and testify that he had overheard Powers offer Diehl $5,000 to kill Mossler.

NO WITNESSES
The session ended abruptly as the state tried to introduce a statement Allen had made to the prosecution. Judge Schulz said he would rule on the statement's admissibility today.

Defence lawyer Percy Foreman was largely silenced Tuesday after Judge Schulz ruled that Foreman could not cross-examine witnesses in behalf of Mrs. Mossler.

The defence lawyers had decided not to call any witnesses for Powers so that Foreman, Powers' chief counsel, would have both opening and closing arguments—a privilege granted in Florida to a defendant who offers no evidence.

Valcartier Plan Battered

Belleville, Ontario, Wednesday, Feb. 23, 1966

Tories Flay Grits For Irish 'Ouster'

By FRASER KELLY
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Snide, scurrilous, boastful, arrogant, insolent, supercilious, contemptuous, inhuman, cold aloof, unjust, and smart Alec.

Those were some of the adjectives used by opposition spokesmen who flailed the daylights out of Defence Minister Hellyer for the bad luck to the Irish Tuesday night.

The Irish in question are 25 families living in the tiny village of Shannon near the Valcartier army base outside Quebec City.

DEBATE HALTED
Debate of the $1,500,000,000 estimates of the defence department ground to a halt as Conservatives took up the shillalegh on their behalf.

The defence department is expropriating their land to extend the Valcartier base for wider arms training. Some of the families have been on their land for 150 years and they don't want to go.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker played his traditional role as protector of the little man.

'NO JUSTIFICATION'
"There can be no justification in an Irish exodus of this kind," he said.

"These are human beings and they are Canadians and I hope this government will have some recognition of the humanity... that is inherent in a mass evacuation from an area where there is land available on either side which is not settled."

"This is a totally unjustified action and has all the earmarks of administrative lawlessness and contempt for the rights of the individual... Is there no heart in the department of national defence?" he asked.

Then he turned his appeals to Prime Minister Pearson who soon beat a hasty retreat from the House.

"Surely in 1966 these people are not to be treated as chattels, to be pushed around by ministers, departmental officials or army officers who place a higher value on saving a few dollars by moving a small number of these men who were in this camp."

He was joined time and time again by former defence minister Gordon Churchill who accused Mr. Hellyer of having something against the Irish.

"A shotgun has been placed at the head of these families... Since the survey began in late 1958, there have been 43, 221 listed deaths, male and female."

This is a shocking example of autocracy in action, absolutely shocking... Mr. Churchill said.

In short, he and the rest of the Tories fired everything they had at Mr. Hellyer.

Finally one of their own new members, Patrick Nowlan, Digby Annapolis Kings, came up with a compromise suggestion that even Mr. Hellyer agreed to — send the matter to a committee.

To Mr. Hellyer's disgust Mr. Churchill refused the compromise and the debate was adjourned until today.

Pearson Defends NATO Role Despite de Gaulle

By FRASER KELLY

OTTAWA — Canada does not consider General de Gaulle's recent observations on the demise of the North Atlantic Treaty Organizations "as truculent or final," Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons yesterday.

While admitting the NATO role must be redefined, he stated emphatically that Canadian troops will not be put under French command in France.

"Canadian troops are in Europe as members of a coalition under a collective agreement. That is the only reason they are in Europe."

FOREIGN TROOPS
"They are not under national command nor would they be under national command in the future," he said.

He spoke just a few hours after External Affairs Minister Paul Martin met with the French ambassador Francois Leduc to discuss the French president's recent press conference.

At the conference Gen. de Gaulle announced that any foreign troops in France after April 4, 1969 will have to be under French command.

He also said NATO no longer is adapted to present day needs. He said France intends to "progressively modify dispositions now in force."

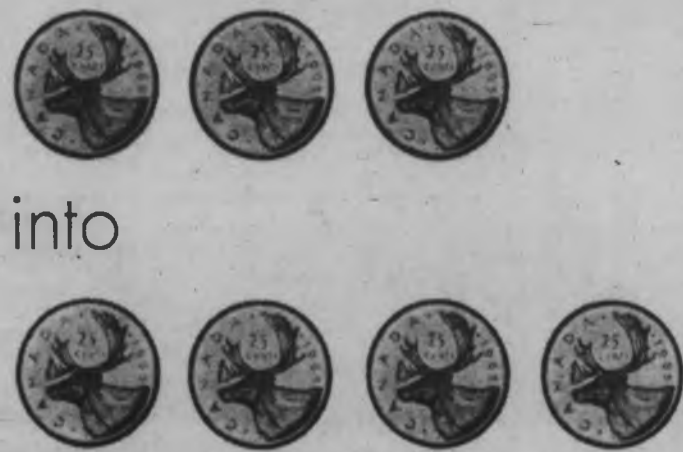

JOHN D. COMMENT
Mr. Pearson said there had been no consultation between France and Canada before the press conference.

He added: "All of General de Gaulle's observations were, however, expressed in general terms and we would expect that in due course the French government would make precise proposals to which Canada and other NATO governments would respond."

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker described the general's view as "very strong and definitely truculent."

Red Crash Toll Now Totals 21

MOSCOW (AP)—Funeral services held Tuesday at the Moscow crematorium disclosed that the crash of a TU-114 airliner at the city's international airport last week claimed 21 lives.

Earlier estimates of the toll by Soviet and Western sources had run as high as 48.

Harvest Labor Shortage Critical in B.C.

British Columbia's agriculture industry is faced with an extreme shortage of harvest labor, the legislature's standing committee on agriculture was told Tuesday.

A B.C. Federation of Agriculture brief urged that a provincial manpower committee be set up immediately to analyze farm labor requirements and find some means of meeting them.

The situation is so serious that if it is not solved soon the industry may disappear, the committee was told by John Kroetz of Vernon, a member of the B.C. Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association.

The delegation pointed out that the new federal-provincial agricultural manpower agreement provides a means of helping in the movement of seasonal labor and for setting up the administrative, advisory and consultative machinery needed for systematic development of a manpower program.

"We ask on behalf of all farmers in this province that the provincial agricultural manpower committee... be set up immediately in order that programs to analyze farm labor requirements... can be attained," their brief stated.

SMALL LURE
The federation blamed the labor shortage in part on the province's buoyant economy and a subsequent rise in employment.

"Few people will prefer seasonal harvest employment when there is steady work clearing slash from dam basins or power line right-of-ways."

TIGHT SPOTS
The farm group also pointed out that acreage of specialty crops such as strawberries and raspberries had increased at a pace that vastly exceeds our traditional supply of labor that was prepared to do harvest work.

"To illustrate, we point out that last year we barely had enough labor to harvest reduced crops, and were forced to request special assistance from schools boards to release students to get us out of several tight spots," the brief stated.

Clinics Lacking

Mentally ill children in B.C. are being classified as juvenile delinquents because of the government's failure to provide forensic clinics, Gordon Dowding (NDP, Burnaby) charged in the legislature Tuesday.

Forensic clinics are designed to help deviant and emotionally disturbed persons who come to the attention of the law.

Mr. Dowding told the House there were "many" children at Brannan Lake who were mentally ill, not juvenile delinquents.

Only one in 60 was being treated, he said, although 5 to 10 per cent of all school-age children are emotionally disturbed.

"Although prediction tables can forecast potential social delinquency or emotional instability with 84 per cent accuracy at age five or six, this field of detection and prevention is almost non-existent," he said.

"Half the cases of juvenile delinquency could be headed off at the pass.

Asian Flu Socks Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—School absenteeism ran as high as 31 per cent Tuesday as an epidemic of flu in Greater Vancouver showed no signs of subsiding.

The suburbs of Richmond and Burnaby appeared to be the areas worst hit by the virus, with the 31 per cent absenteeism figure being recorded at a Richmond elementary school.

In Burnaby, absenteeism ranged from 10 per cent to 25 per cent.

Martin Discovers Minister's a 'He'

Health Minister Eric Martin apparently thought either that federal Health Minister Mac-

Eachen is a woman or that Judy LaMarsh still holds the Ottawa portfolio.

In a speech in the legislature Tuesday, Gordon Dowding (NDP, Burnaby) referred to the federal minister while criticizing the Socred mental health services policy.

Intending to stab a rebuttal across the floor, Mr. Martin aimed a forefinger and began: "She..."

"It's a he, Mr. Minister—a he," the opposition jibed as the House broke up with laughter.

Said Mr. Dowding: "I suggest the minister learn who the federal minister is, then learn his department's regulations, then initiate a publicly-owned ambulance service."

Socreds Lashed

Voters 'Blackmailed' Thunders Gibson

By BARRY JOHNSON

North Vancouver MLA Gordon Gibson said in the legislature Tuesday he would resign his seat if it would move Premier Bennett to go ahead with a new First Narrows crossing.

Terming the premier's "blackmailing" of North Shore voters "the most despicable thing" he had seen in politics, Mr. Gibson said:

"If I am the only one standing in the way of the bridge I will step aside if he will do the job he should do."

But he added later: "I'm getting old and mean and I just might be mean enough to run again."

STRONG ATTACK

Mr. Gibson was twice ordered by deputy speaker William Spears (SC-Cariboo) to withdraw remarks as he voiced stronger and stronger invective against the premier and his Socred supporters.

Once in his angry speech he stated: "The real fear and danger in this country is in the mind and brain of the premier."

Ordered to withdraw, he added: "All right then—I'm very very fearful of this government—and the premier leads the government."

'ARROGANT'

He was again ordered to withdraw when he referred to the actions of the premier in Friday's debate in which he said Mr. Bennett threatened Speaker William Murray in Mr. Murray's office that he would call a snap election.

Said Mr. Gibson: "Last Friday... I have never seen anyone as childish and arrogant as our premier that night. That man who lost control of himself is in no position to hold the position of honor and trust that he does."

He was ordered to withdraw because the statement was a personal reference to a member not seated.

Mr. Gibson withdrew and continued: "It was another of his or the government's lust for power when they can't have their own way."

"He acted like a little kid a baby when he couldn't shove around the members of this House."

Mr. Bennett allows Socred members from the Victoria area to worry for hours about the whole world he said. He should be the last man to call "time."

For more than half an hour Mr. Gibson roared the silent government for failing to move on the North Shore bridge.

"Mr. Bennett has the money," he said. "And the minister of highways has the plan."

When the premier bought the First Narrows bridge in 1955 he took on responsibility for providing transportation for the North Shore he said. He had promised a new bridge in every election since.

He accused the premier of threatening: "If you want the bridge get rid of Gibson."

"There is no misconception," Mr. Gibson said. "It's the premier that's holding up the bridge for ransom. It's planned and schemed."

"The premier is trying to make every person who uses that bridge bend to his will."

"It's about the most despicable thing I can think of."

Saying he had been watching the legislature for 15 years Mr. Gibson charged: "Only the premier is standing in the way... of political ambition and political greed. In fact he does nothing unless it benefits himself or his political party."

The four Social Credit cabinet ministers from Vancouver are powerless to help because "the premier somehow has them shackled. They are negligent in their duties and 10 times overpaid" he roared.

The premier with the minister on the platform in North Vancouver in the last election threatened North Shore voters "that if Gibson is elected no bridge."

"I didn't believe it. I said it couldn't be true."

"I'll work as long as I need to keep this low dirty politics out of my country."

He said there was a rumor in West Vancouver: "If you want a bridge learn how to vote."

In his statement that he was fearful of the government Mr. Gibson continued: "Banks must pay its shot. The municipalities, the cities, the universities have to bow."

"They know if they speak up they'll be cut from ear to ear."

"He thinks he's God."

"There's a pollution—a political pollution—spreading through the land," he said. "It is planned by you, Mr. Premier, behind closed doors."

SLAVES
Even the cabinet and other government members were afraid to speak, he charged.

"They have become slaves. They've got what they wanted and they can't equal any more."

"I know this is why you wanted your bank—for more power and domination over the freedom of the people."

LANGUAGE
At this point, Recreation Minister Kiernan rose to demand the Speaker require Mr. Gibson to withdraw: "I don't believe that kind of language is permitted in this or any other legislature."

Mr. Gibson was not told to withdraw.

But he did say he had changed his mind about building a monument to Mr. Bennett atop the Peace River dam.

"I'm going to build him a cage to wander around in."

House Baffles U.S. Students

Five students from Western Washington State College at Bellingham had their hands full here Tuesday, trying to understand the three political parties represented in the B.C. legislature.

Dr. John J. Hebal, in charge of the students from his class in public personnel administration, said the students had a chance to see the Social Credit, New Democrat and Liberal politicians in action during the afternoon sitting.

"It takes the students a little time to appreciate the difference between political parties here, and more time to sort out how Social Credit parties differ in Alberta and B.C.," he said.

NOT THE SAME

Socreds in B.C. and Alberta are different, says Dr. Hebal. "Just as the Democratic Party is not the same, say, between Washington State and Mississippi."

British Columbia's parliamentary system of government "differs in very interesting ways from state systems in the United States," he said, conceding that B.C. had an advantage over Washington State by holding its legislative sessions every year.

"Our legislature holds a 60-day session every two years."

Alberni, Totems Rated

ALBERNI — Alberni Chiefs and Victoria Totems will be top-seeded in the Vancouver Island boys high school basketball tournament here Friday and Saturday, but the shadow of Oak Bay hangs over the field.

Chiefs won the up-Island tournament last weekend. Totems upset Oak Bay, 31-29, for their first win over Gary Taylor's club in two years.

But the Rays are still the defending B.C. champions, and as such they command more respect than any club in the eight-team draw.

In Friday's opening round, Victoria High plays Chemainus. Alberni meets Mount View, Oak Bay takes on Courtenay and Clarendon faces Nanaimo.

Top three teams go to the B.C. tournament March 10-11-12 in Vancouver.

Eight Clubs Set Sights On Tourney

Eight Vancouver Island girls basketball teams will be fighting at Mount View High School Friday and Saturday for the Island's two spots in the B.C. tournament.

Victoria High girls are defending the Vancouver Island championship. First and second teams go to Vancouver March 10, 11, 12 in search of the provincial crown.

In Friday's opening round, Courtenay plays Oak Bay at 5, Qualicum meets Esquimalt at 6:15, Chemainus takes on Vic High at 7:30, and Nanaimo plays Mount View at 8:45.

Play in the double-knockout tournament runs from 9 a.m. Saturday with the final at 8:45.

Veteran's Future with Club Uncertain

By JIM TANG

A rift that has always been there between goalkeeper Al Millar and some of his teammates appears to have widened beyond hope of bridging and it seems likely that the 36-year-old veteran has played his last game of hockey for the Victoria Maple Leafs.

What bridges there were may have been burned yesterday.

General-manager Buck Houle and coach Frank Mario both said last night that Millar is still with the club and no decision had yet been made on whether Millar or rookie Gary Holland would be in goal at Memorial Arena tonight against Seattle Totems.

Millar, on the other hand, was certain that he had played his last game in a Victoria uniform.

"If they want to pay my salary then I'll stay, but I don't think they will," Millar said yesterday afternoon. "They haven't said anything but the hand-writing is on the wall. I don't think you'll see me play here again unless it's in another sweater."

That a simmering situation heated by dislike—that has existed since the Maple Leafs came to Victoria last season—had finally come to a boil became evident last Friday in San Francisco when Millar was replaced by Holland, who had played only part of one period previously this season.

First evidence of a rift came early last season when the Leafs got away to a bad start and rookie-goalie Gary Smith was sent out to replace Millar.

Millar regained his job after

Smith had played seven games, and the veteran's fine play was a major factor in the successful late-season drive for a playoff spot. But, Millar believes, the current troubles between himself and some of his teammates are a carryover from last season.

With the Leafs reversing themselves this season and getting away to a tremendous start, all was serene, at least on the surface, until a mid-December trip to San Francisco, where the Leafs lost back-to-back games.

Dressing-Room Rumpus

Matters almost came to a head here on Jan. 11 during a game against Portland and Buckers when Millar and Houle had a serious dressing-room altercation between the second and third periods.

Then came the most recent California trip and, it appears, the trouble really started last Wednesday in Los Angeles when the Blades and the Leafs got into a third-period fight.

Aut Erickson paired off with Bill Orban, Bill Shvets had it out with Ray LaRose and John Sleaver tangled with Marc Boileau.

Millar feels some of his teammates blamed him because he didn't go to lend a hand to Sleaver, who was handicapped in his bout because his sweater had been pulled over his head by a linesman.

In rebuttal Millar says that he was warned by referee Willie Papp to keep out of things and that he didn't see the set-to between Sleaver and Boileau.

'Could Have Changed Before'

"I'm not upset because they decided to make a change in goal for the game in San Francisco," Millar said. "That is their prerogative but I do think they could have made the change several other times when they would have been better—like the night when we lost 6-0 in San Francisco and the Leafs got five goals in the first period, or when we played three games in three nights or the night I played here against Portland when I was sick."

'Prize Sheep Without Shepherd'

"There's no reason," he continued, "why this club couldn't win this league easily. This is the best club in the minors except for Rochester but that story in The Hockey News has it just right. Victoria has the best club but Portland has the best leadership. We are just like a bunch of prize sheep without a shepherd. There is no such thing on our club as constructive criticism. There's just some guys who get the knife out."

Asked to comment last night, Houle said "the fact still remains that Millar hasn't played well and the team hasn't played well. All Frank and I are interested in is getting the team back on an even keel. What we want to know is whose fault it is."

"There is no change in our club. Millar is still with the club and Frank doesn't know who's going to play in goal against Seattle. The team comes first, the personnel comes second. Whatever Frank and I do is based on this thinking. We know we have a good hockey club and that we can win. It's our job to get it going again."

Mario was even more to the point. "He didn't have that attitude when he was leading the league. He can't have his cake and eat it, too. That's a boy talking and not a man who is aware of a man's responsibilities."

Club Shouldn't Play Him

"I think we had to make a move the other night. Perhaps we should have made it sooner to give the young fellow (Houle) a chance to play a few games but I knew we had to make the shift last Friday. We weren't going well and we were trying to win this thing. And I still think we can."

Elder-statesman Andy Heberton, who commands the respect of all his teammates, was asked about the situation.

"The way I see it," he said, "is that if a player doesn't want to play for a club then the club shouldn't play him."

And that may be where the matter stands now. The probability exists that a change will be made within the Toronto farm system but there may be no announcement until Rochester Americans show up here for an interlocking game Saturday night.

Heart Ills Hit Norris

CHICAGO (AP) — James D. Norris, co-owner of the Chicago Black Hawks hockey team, was reported Tuesday in satisfactory condition in Presbyterian St. Luke's Hospital after treatment for a heart condition.

Hospital attendants said Norris entered the hospital Feb. 15 for diagnosis and treatment. He has had heart trouble in the past.

It could happen that Bob Perreault may be staying over and that Millar will depart with the AHL club.

"I'll go anywhere — Tulsa, Rochester or any other club as long as I don't lose any money," Millar says.

"It's in Punch Imlach's hands right now," Houle said, "but he is rather handicapped by the injuries to Johnny Bower and Terry Sawchuk. In the meantime, Millar is still on our club and as of now Frank isn't sure who'll be in goal against the Totems."

Unless there is a tremendous bit of overnight bridge-building, the fellow will almost certainly spell his name H-O-L-L-A-N-D.

Vancouver NHL Bid Not Right

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank J. Selke, vice-chairman of Montreal Canadiens, said Tuesday he believes Vancouver's bid for a National Hockey League franchise was passed over because a poor presentation did not reflect complete community support.

The Montreal hockey executive, long a prominent voice in NHL affairs, made the remark during a visit to Mayor William Ratcliffe's office. He said NHL governors got the impression that a small group of men suddenly wanted to join the league.

He was referring to the bid made by a group headed by Cyrus McLean, chairman of the board of the B.C. Telephone Co.

"Now you have to regroup forces and see if all interested groups can be joined together with full community support," Mr. Selke told reporters.

"If you are going to give up after one rebuff the application won't worth while in the first place."

More Administration Money

Less Student Control In University Athletics

By ROBIN JEFFREY

More administration money and less student control are the two chief features of tentative proposals to reorganize the athletic program at the University of Victoria.

Until this year, students have had virtually complete control of all facets of athletics—including purchasing equipment, drawing up schedules, preparing team budgets, and appointing coaches. In September, however, Bob Bell, a member of the faculty, took up his duties as athletic co-ordinator.

This year Bell has taught physical education and—in theory—"co-ordinated" the athletic program. But since athletics had previously been administered almost entirely by students, Bell's duties and his rights were indistinct.

THREE STUDENTS — A committee of three students—athletic council president Bruce Wallace, Alma Mater Society president Paul Williamson and Rick Kurtz—drew up a new plan for athletic organization. Then they consulted faculty representatives—registrars R. R. Jeffels and A. E. Lott.

Changes were made and Saturday the new plan will be discussed at a meeting with university president Dr. Malcolm Taylor.

TO SENATE — This meeting could lead to final agreement on what form the new organization is to take. And from there, it would be a matter of submitting it to the university senate and the student council for approval.

The proposals would have an athletic directorate of three students and three senate appointees, with Bell, as athletic "director," sitting in as secretary. The directorate would decide questions of policy and approve the annual budget which would then be turned over to Bell to administer.

GRANT, TOO — But this budget would consist of an administration grant in addition to the customary allowance from the student AMS fee which has provided athletics with most of its money in the past.

"This proposal will bring in administration money," Bell says, "and more money is required for athletic expansion."

Each representative team would send members to the extramural council on which Bell would be a voting member. And men's and women's intramural councils, under student control, would be established to control a house-league system on campus.

Bell feels that the plan "is not solid enough in its present form," but that the difficulties can be worked out. Wallace, as student athletic president, is in favor of giving the time-consuming job of administering growing university to a full-time, paid and qualified director.

Remember These Names:

Cronk, Quance And Nutbrown

By JIM TAYLOR

Ray Mischook . . . Skip Cronk . . . Ashley Court . . . Dan Quance . . . Don Andrews . . . Dave Nutbrown.

Today the names don't mean much in Victoria, but remember them. They belong to boys who will play a big part in deciding who wins the Canadian junior men's basketball tournament.

The seven-team event will be held at Central Junior High School next week, with the defending-champion Victoria Chinooks as host club. And now that all the entries are in, Chinooks know they have a rough road ahead.

First draw of the double-knockout event next Monday puts Mt. Royal University of Calgary Cougars against Hamilton Quigleys, UBC Jayvees vs Fredrickton Elms, and Cranooks vs Halifax All-Saints. Montreal Orchids, who lost to Chinooks in last year's final have drawn the first-round bye.

Those names mentioned above might not mean much to Victoria, but Chinooks know them all too well.

They particularly remember Mischook, a 6'3", 190-pounder with Montreal Orchids.

"BEST WE'VE SEEN" — "He was impossible to check," team manager Harold Turner recalls. "We tried everybody on him but he hits from anywhere. He's about the best junior player we've ever seen and this year he must be even better, because he ended the season with a 34 points per game average."

Ashley Court is with Calgary and last year in the tournament he scored a record 44 points in one game. Cougars dropped their opening game but were still one of the top clubs last year, and this season they've added both height and scoring power.

OLD RAINMAKERS — Skip Cronk and Wayne Hall-dane were with Prince Rupert Rainmakers two years ago when they won the B.C. high school tournament. They're Cougars now, and so are Dan Quance and Don Andrews. One weighs 205 pounds, one 220, and they both stand 6'8".

These are the teams Chinooks know best. But out of the east comes word that Hamilton Quigleys are firing 80 and 90 points a game in an undefeated season.

SHARP ROOKIE — David Nutbrown is a rookie with Fredrickton, a playmaker who stepped into a starting guard spot. Like Chinooks' Ken Jackson, he is rated a fine outside shooter.

And, of course, there are the Jayvees of UBC, who wiped out Chinooks in three straight games to win the B.C. title.

"We're in tough," Turner said. "I honestly don't think there'll be a weak team in the tournament, and that should make it the best yet."

Three games Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, two Thursday and one Friday make up the schedule. Should a team come out of the lower bracket and force an extra game, it will be played Saturday night.

Coach Dave Skeem announced at the meeting that the Lions have signed Dave Moton, an end from the University of Southern California.

Club president Alan Eyre was re-elected to the board at the recommendation of the board of directors, although his term also had expired. He was returned for a second presidential term.

Blades 10 Portland 0

LOS ANGELES—Hal Laycoe probably still doesn't believe it, but his Portland Buckaroos were beaten, 10-0, here Tuesday night by, of all people, Los Angeles Blades.

Getting hat tricks from Leo LaBine and Buddy Boone, the Blades gave the league-leading Buckaroos their worst beating.

Against Seattle, made 28 stops including 15 in the second period. Dave Kelly faced 40 shots in the Portland net.

In winning, the Blades moved out of the cellar, past San Francisco Seals into fifth place. Buckaroos used up one of their games in hand over Victoria Maple Leafs, who are five points back in second place.

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

Victoria Fish and Game Club members Monday night voted 51 to 14 to keep all kinds of commercial fishing out of the Saanich Inlet sports fishing waters.

The specific issue was over the application of three Saanich Inlet boatowners to dip-net minnows for a frozen and live bait industry.

The club had already turned down a fisheries department proposal that herring seines be allowed in Saanich Inlet on a restricted basis to provide a bait industry.

Monday, members heeded the advice of Fish and Game Club life member and long-time Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association member and honorary president Ray Ritchie who warned: "If we let them start in any shape or form it would be just the beginning."

He said Saanich Inlet is one of the few places kept entirely for sports fishing.

Discussion from the club floor became emotional at times and Howard English, member of the sports salmon advisory board and Amalgamated Conservation Society delegate for the Fish and Game Club, pleaded with members to favor dip-netting in Saanich Inlet on the basis of conservation of salmon.

English, who in January was awarded a club conservation award and who has been making a two-year study of the effects of herring seining on salmon stocks, argued that if the boat-house operators didn't get permission to dip-net in Saanich Inlet they would take an 800-foot seine net into adjacent and Pedder Bay waters.

He maintained dip-netting of five to 10 tons of bait herring from Saanich Inlet wouldn't do any harm to the salmon because dip-nets do not pick up the salmon or grise. But, he argued that if one more seine were placed on the outside it would be harmful to salmon stocks because grise would be picked up.

He argued that dip-netting has been going on in Saanich Inlet for 15 years in any event. Illegally in latter years.

"I am fighting a desperate battle to prevent seining of herring over salmon stocks," he told members. "The more herring taken by dip nets the less by seiners. We should encourage the bait industry to take herring by dip-netting," he argued.

Executive member Bill James asked if there was any reason bait fishermen couldn't use their dip nets outside Saanich Inlet and English replied they would not be required by law to use them outside.

When a questioner from the floor suggested the bait dealers would require much more than the five tons of herring it was proposed to take from Saanich Inlet, English said they would take part of their catch from Saanich Inlet and the "rest from the outside."

Members questioned the ability of the fisheries officers to enforce restrictions, especially as herring dip-netting is carried on at night.

Executive member Robert Kennedy described the dip-netting proposals as the "thin edge of the wedge... the same as a tonnage for Strathcona Park. Do you think they will stay at 10 tons a year?" he asked. "Next year sports fishing will increase and they will want 20 tons... and then 30 tons," he predicted in answering his own question.

"They want a live bait industry as well as a frozen bait industry. It would not be long before they would want even more," warned Saanich Inlet Chinook Club president Al Wright.

A secret ballot was taken, after which English was instructed—and agreed—to vote against all kinds of commercial fishing in Saanich Inlet when he attends as a delegate to the Amalgamated Conservation Society meeting tonight.

Fisheries Director Rod Houston is expected to be at the meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in the Chamber of Commerce office, Bank of Montreal, Yates and Douglas, to discuss the Saanich Inlet bait fishing proposals.

Annual general meeting and supper dance of the Chinook Club will be held Saturday, starting at 7 p.m. at the Ingham Hotel. Chinook Club members and their friends and VSIAA members are welcome and tickets at $2.50 each must be picked up by Thursday at the latest at Stan Williams Sports Shop headquarters. Anglers-Anchorage Marina at Brentwood or city sporting goods stores.

Victoria Fish and Game Club will hold its annual executive stag at the Goldstream Clubhouse March 4 with all fish and game members welcome. Tickets are $2 each, including a meal, and may be obtained from Owen Lohr or from club headquarters at Stan Williams Sports Shop.

Tenpin Champs Back For Colonist Bonspiel

The champions are back. Terry Moody, Barry Stowe and Don Shaw, who have yet to be beaten in The Daily Colonist Vancouver Island Tenpin Bonspiel are again together on the Trophy Shop team which has swept 13 straight victories in the previous two years while winning the Colonist Trophy, and the $400 which goes with it, twice.

They won six in a row in 1965 with Dave Lee as the fourth member of the team, then won seven straight last year with Bob Munn replacing the absent Lee.

This year, Munn will be absent and his replacement has not yet been announced, but Moody, Stowe and Shaw are on the Trophy Shop entry form which was received earlier this week.

Also among the early entries for the third annual bonspiel, again scheduled over the Easter weekend, April 8-10, at Mayfair Lanes, are last season's runners-up—Gar's Trophies "A."

The runners-up also have one line-up change. Back are Alex Holowachuk and Fred and Eva Nelson, and they have Elmore Holowachuk replacing Lind McCulliffe as the fourth team member.

In last year's final, Trophy Shop got off to a big start in the first game and eventually won 2,410 pins to 2,281, making up the 178-410 handicap difference by the first frame of the third game.

This year, the handicap difference figures to be slightly larger.

Moody is the same at 179, Shaw's average has gone to 181 from 179 and Stowe has improved by three pins to 183.

Gar's Trophies this year have a combined average of 611 as compared to 603 for the last year but the handicap this year is based on 90 per cent of the difference between the combined team average and the team scratch of 800.

Although entries will be accepted until March 31, the total is already half-way towards last year's total of 96 teams and more than one-third of the way to the limit of 128 teams.

Only the first 128 teams entering will be accepted making it possible to play through the four events up to the finals over the holiday weekend. The finals and the win-up party for the winners will be held on Monday, April 11.

With few minor changes rules are the same as for last year. All tenpin bowlers who have played a minimum of 21 games in sanctioned WIBC or ABC league play this season are eligible. So are eligible bowlers who obtain an unattached membership card this year. They may use last season's average.

Entry fee is $3 per bowler ($12 per team), and bowling is paid for at the regular charge of 50 cents a line as the three-game matches are played.

For this, bowlers get a chance at a guaranteed $2,000 in cash prizes and all teams must be beaten at least twice before being eliminated. All are assured of a minimum of three three-game matches.

Following is a partial list of completed early entries with team lineups and averages and team handicaps in parentheses, both subject to a final check:

Over Three Seasons

Dodgers' Big Two Want $1,000,000

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, the "big two" of the Los Angeles Dodgers' pitching staff, are prepared to ask for $1,000,000 for the next three seasons to be divided equally, the Los Angeles Times was informed Tuesday.

Baseball's biggest salary package deal, if consummated, would bring Koufax and Drysdale approximately $167,000 apiece annually through 1968 and make them the best-paid players in the game's history.

Willie Mays of the Giants, who recently signed a two-year contract at $125,000 a season, now has that distinction.

Both Koufax and Drysdale were in the $70,000-plus class last year when the Dodgers won the National League pennant and world series.

Koufax, who is 30, won 26 games and lost 8 with the Dodgers last year, had an earned run average of 2.04 and set an all-time major league strikeout record of 382.

Drysdale, 29, had a won-lost record of 23-12 and an era of 2.77.

Neither was available for comment Tuesday, and Dodger general manager E. J. Ravert professed ignorance of their reported demands.

"They haven't talked to me about any such deal, so there is no way I could give them a yes or a no," said Ravert.

"I am prepared to make each of them a firm offer," he said without being specific.

He said he would contact them and try to arrange a conference Wednesday or Thursday at his office.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, hampered by a back injury in his loss to titleholder Cassius Clay Nov. 22, has been declared physically fit and will return to boxing.

Patterson said after the Clay fight that he would not return to the ring until his back was better. He underwent medical treatment following the fight and was told that rest was the best cure.

"The doctors have declared him fit," Patterson's advisor, Al Bolan, said Monday. "He will definitely fight again. There are no arrangements yet as to where, when or whom."

Patterson has indicated he would like to try a comeback in Sweden, which he calls "my second home." His brother, Ray, also a heavyweight, lives there now.

Don Knight, 18, of Dundas, Ont., the Canadian champion who finished third in the 1965 world competition, was sixth after two figures, with 301.6 points, trailing Nobuo Sato of Japan, 302.0 points.

In 10th place was the veteran Toronto skater, Dr. Charles Snelling, 29, with 288.4 points.

Jay Humphrey, 37, of Vancouver, was tied for 13th with Giordano Abbondato of Italy, with 276.4 points.

DAVOS, Switzerland (CP-AP) — were dominant in the compulsory-figures phase of pairs competition.

After the compulsory figures in pairs competition, which also began Tuesday, Soviet entries were first and second. The Canadian brother-sister entry of Paul Huetnergard, 21, and Susan, 17, placed last and said their failure was because of "an error of interpretation" in Canada of the world rules.

Danzon, a tall, good-looking man from Vienna who holds the European title, piled up 332.3 points in his bid to succeed Alain Calmat of France as world champion. Calmat is not entered this year.

Marijuana Warning Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — A pamphlet informing students of the dangers of marijuana will be distributed in Vancouver schools.

School trustees have approved a request by H. F. Hoskin, executive director of the narcotic addiction foundation of British Columbia, to put the pamphlet in the hands of school counsellors.

The pamphlet, entitled Marijuana, Danger of Delight? is written by the foundation's coordinator of education, Dr. Robert Halliday.

In a letter to the school board, Hoskin said use of marijuana among young people in Vancouver appears to be on the increase.

Broadcaster's Secrets

'Twist His Words, Throw a Bomb'

Radio has found its purpose in giving voice to people who were never heard before, broadcaster Ralph Pashley declared Tuesday at the University of Victoria.

Mr. Pashley, who debates daily with callers to his radio show, said it had become a forum for the majority of people who previously "could only grumble."

He said his 14-month-old phone-along program has become a force which sways Premier Bennett and his cabinet and has reduced the effectiveness of minority pressure groups.

MAJORITY

"The majority has found that rather than mutter into their beer they can mutter into the phone and be heard by the rest of the majority," said Mr. Pashley before a lunch-hour gathering of students.

He asserted that it was the first time in the history of mankind that the majority could speak out and be heard.

Hair-Pulling Out of Hand

HARBOR CITY, Calif. (AP) — A milling mob of teen-agers hurled flaming molotov cocktails and rocks at 25 Los Angeles police officers for more than an hour before they could be dispersed, officers said.

Police said the crowd—estimated at 150—had gathered at the Harbor City Youth Opportunities centre to watch two girls in a hair-pulling fight.

Mr. Pashley accused newspapers of choosing for publication only letters that are well-written and properly spelled.

DON'T MISS IT

The people who call him with problems are "people who don't speak the King's English well, but who make up for it in enthusiasm."

Mr. Pashley, a former radio advertising salesman, began his show here in December, 1964.

"It wasn't long before Premier Bennett phoned me up and said: 'I don't miss it (the program). I can't afford to miss it,'" said Mr. Pashley.

WILL ARGUE

Students applauded when he said: "I'll argue at great length, even if I don't know what I'm talking about."

In his job, he said, "you have to be a walking encyclopedia, have a retentive memory and know how to get out of a situation."

He gave his formula for defeating a hostile caller who knows more than he does about a subject.

'THROW BOMB'

When someone challenges him on his knowledge of the Viet Nam situation, for example, he will say: "From the tone of your voice, sir, I know that no matter what I say, you won't understand."

This provokes the caller to an outburst, while Mr. Pashley takes notes.

Blasted Beauty

Who says high-rise apartments don't have beautifying effect? Rockery effect being laid here on boulevards of Catherine Street by stonemasons Jose and Frank Cabira is by courtesy of excavations on Simcoe, to make way for apartments. Residents of Catherine are reported to be delighted by new feature.—(William E. John)

Charge Expanded

Norman Charles Spahan began facing a charge for being intoxicated in a public place and ended being charged with impaired driving and driving while disqualified.

Spahan, of Brentwood, pleaded not guilty to the charges in central magistrate's court Tuesday.

But Magistrate William Oatley found him guilty as charged and sentenced him to 14 days in jail for impaired driving and three months for driving while disqualified.

CAR IN DITCH

Central Saanich Constable John Galling said he found Spahan's car in a ditch on Wallace Drive Jan. 16.

Asleep in the car was a man identified as Ernest Olsen.

Spahan arrived at the scene soon afterwards and denied that he had been driving the car, court was told.

DRIVING DENIED

He maintained that Olsen was the driver but Olsen denied this. Constable Galling quoted Spahan as saying Olsen had shown him to tell him that he had driven the car into the ditch.

Crown witnesses testified to seeing Spahan drive his car that day and Olsen told the court that he had "passed out" before the accident.

PRIOR CONVICTIONS

The defence called no evidence.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Spahan had been convicted in February, 1964, for careless driving and had two convictions for driving while disqualified.

Jack Seppala knew his position when RCMP officers found his car on a front lawn of a house on Millstream early Tuesday morning.

THREE DAYS

Seppala, COGS Estevan pleaded guilty to impaired driving and was fined $350. His licence was suspended.

Mr. Birkett said Seppala also told the officers that he had been on a "three-day drunk."

Seppala's car ran off Millstream, into a ditch, through a fence and then on to the lawn, court was told.

When Murray Naughton was refused treatment at the observation ward at Royal Jubilee Hospital Monday night because he had been drinking, he threw a rock through a window.

Naughton, 1046 View, pleaded guilty to causing wilful damage under $50 and was placed on a $300 bond for six months.

Replacement value for the tiny two-inch-square reinforced window was $10, court was told.

Joseph Justin Provost, alias Joseph Justin McDonald, was jailed for a month for vagrancy. He had pleaded guilty Monday.

'Form Board To Buy Water'

Latoria Road residents who want water from the Greater Victoria Water District have been told to form their private water board and buy wholesale.

People from the area, which suffered a hepatitis epidemic late in 1965, beseeched the water district before, and the reasons for the district board's refusal to do anything were given in a letter by Water Commissioner Ronald Upward.

"I wrote a long letter giving our reasons and stating how uneconomic it was from the board's standpoint to install a small stringer operation such as this," Mr. Upward told board members Tuesday.

Persistent Firebug Hits Rink For Third Time

Schofield's Roller Rink was hit for the third time Sunday by arson-minded vandals.

City police said Tuesday that "someone" had doused fuel oil on a pile of wood which rested against the rear of the rink at 114 Niagara.

An attempt to light it apparently had failed so more fuel oil was added and a match thrown, igniting the pile.

FIREMEN CALLED

It is believed the vandal then phoned the fire department. However, the blaze was out when the units arrived. Police found the attempt when investigating the call Monday.

Two previous attempts have been made to set fire to the building, all of which were unsuccessful.

About $100 damage was done to a new shipment of orchids in the greenhouse at Government House Monday night.

The lighting in a waterfall at the main gates was damaged to the value of $50, police said.

Visitors Triumph In Romeo, Juliet

By E. D. WARD HARRIS

Following an extended tour of the interior cities of B.C., the Vancouver Playhouse Theatre Company brought its production of Romeo and Juliet to the McPherson last night—and triumphed.

Many share the honors, but chief accolades must be reserved for Malcolm Black, whose direction of this Shakespearean tragedy is fresh and vital.

SOMBRE SET

The single set, though ingenious, is sombre, and this lack of scene-change puts some strain on one's powers of concentration.

Mr. Black has used every theatrical technique, dramatic device, stage picture and form of movement. His adroit use of glowing costume colors and swirling draperies to point up the action, is reminiscent of some of the great productions of this play.

CLARITY GOAL

In a program note, the director says he has not tried, in the academic sense, to delve into obscure meanings and nuances but rather to tell a story with clarity.

This aside dig at the Olivier school is unnecessary, for Romeo and Juliet does not require any delving. It is abundantly clear and eminently straightforward.

Although obscure meanings and nuances are not needed, a complete understanding is essential to the part of all cast members. On this score this production cannot be faulted.

SLIGHT, WISTFUL

Susan Ringwood is an appealing Juliet. Slight, pretty, wistful, she succeeds in making the rich vocabulary of Shakespeare almost unbelievable in the mouth of a 14-year-old.

Far better in anguish than in joy, she moves gracefully and wears her clothes well. Her voice, however, leaves something to be desired. We hear what she says, but depth of range and shading are limited.

NO FALSE EMPHASIS

In the balcony scene Miss Ringwood acts beautifully, every controlled gesture has meaning. She speaks the so well known lines without any trace of false emphasis.

But whilst I think she fully comprehends the role, her lack of vocal range makes her interpretation appear shallow.

Romeo, a thankless role if ever there was one, is more than adequately handled by Neil Deland. He gives full weight to his speeches, moves well and like everyone else in the cast, carries his clothes as to the manner born.

COMER ALIVE

But he failed to move me until after sentence of banishment is passed. Then, and not till then, was he believable. The reason seems to be that this actor only really comes alive when in action.

The part of Mercutio is a cruelly unfair to that of Romeo. Give this over to a more competent actor and he'll always steal the show. And that's what happened last night.

MAGNIFICENT

J. C. Juliano was magnificent. He charged the part with lusty life and bawdy humor, and his death in the big duel scene left a gap never adequately filled.

With 11 years of experience already under his belt, this is one Canadian actor who must surely have a big future in wider fields.

Candy Kane, a fine actress, has a sure grip of the role as Juliet's nurse. She glides effortlessly from comedy to anguish and back again. But that "Conceit" I missed half of what she said. When, in her grief, she tells of Tybalt's death, she forgets the accent and is immediately audible.

Gregory Reid (Benvolio) is convincing and provides an excellent foil for the dashing Mercutio.

ALWAYS ON MOVE

All others in the large cast are well into the play's spirit, always on the move, always natural, testimony to good direction. Hutchinson Shandro deserves to be singled out for his movement and sense of fun as Peter a clownish servant.

This is Shakespeare as it should be presented—in the grand style. Nothing has been left to chance. From the friar's herbal box to the sword play everything is in period and carefully done.

FINE COMPANY

We are indeed fortunate to have this fine company here. The only pity is that tonight is the final performance. It could have filled the McPherson for a week, with madmen every day. However, let's be grateful and pray for a speedy return.

Mark and James Fraser

Youthful Violinist Collects Double Honors

Talented Victoria violinist, Mark Butler, 17, has the double distinction of being chosen for the National Youth Orchestra for the third time and also being accepted as a pupil at the Royal Academy of Music London.

Mark, son of Canon Hilary C. Butler and Mrs. Butler of 2684 Seaview Road, will travel to London to begin studies in September.

Prior to moving to Victoria in 1961, Mark was a piano pupil of his mother Mrs. Josephine Butler, a registered music teacher.

He later studied violin in Oliver and became concertmaster of the school orchestra. James Fraser has been responsible for the musical development of Mark Butler since 1961 and through his efforts Mark satisfied the audition panel for the National Youth Orchestra in 1964.

After completing a season with this distinguished group of young musicians, he was invited to play with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra. In addition to this orchestral experience, he has also been a member of the first violin section of the Greater Victoria Schools Orchestra. Scholarships seem to come naturally to Mark. He has been

They Almost Packed It Up

Jay and Americans Struggled to Top-Twice

By DAN LEWIS
Last in a Series

There was a time, not too long ago, when Jay and the Americans were about ready to chuck it all and return to such normal routines as a shoe salesman, student, apprentice mortician, and textile business man.

That's where these five young men from Brooklyn were headed until they got together several years ago and formed a singing group now recognized as one of the more successful in the nation.

But the success that came easy was difficult to sustain. Jay and the Americans made the big first time out with a song called "She Cried" in the spring of 1962. How the record soared! It sold more than 500,000, pushed way up to the top of the charts, and brought an immediate avalanche of bookings all over the country.

NOT READY — Alas, the boys weren't prepared for personal appearances. They confess that the act bombed out on tour. It almost killed off Jay and the Americans for good.

They put out two more records and, at best, generated only limited excitement again by their own admission.

ONE BY ONE

Taking them one by one, that would have meant: Jay Black, leader of the group (born Nov. 2, 1941), would have returned to the shoe store as a salesman.

Kenny Vance (born Dec. 9, 1943), lover of antiques, and heavy reader, back to his father's textile business.

Sandy Deane (born Jan. 30, 1943), father a salesman, business administration graduate New York University, who considered joining his father as a salesman.

Howie Kane (born June 6, 1942), a licensed mortician, whose father owns three funeral homes. "Nuff said."

Marty Sanders (born Feb. 28, 1941), an advertising major at New York Community College, he was considering turning, however, to songwriting and producing records.

GOOD AT

Fate intervened at this juncture and their future was decided by circumstances that led the five talented young men to a new manager and a new booking office.

"This time, we really put ourselves together," Jay recalls. "We made sure we had a good act, so that our success didn't depend exclusively on records."

By the spring of 1963, Jay and the Americans were ready for that second try at success. Soon opportunity knocked a second time, a new hit record. Only in America. New bookings followed on the strength of it. This time they were ready for the personal appearances. And they made good.

ANKLED BACK

"Even when the record stopped selling, we were asked back," Jay reported.

They followed with Let's Rock the Door which Sandy wrote. Where they had a soft sound before, this was their first hard rock 'n' roll record. It was a profitable interlude because it solid 100,000 records the very first week it was out.

Last year, their big hit was Come a Little Bit Closer, which landed in the Top 20 and stayed there for more than a dozen weeks. Still selling strong around the country, nearly 500,000 copies of the record have crossed counters into the eager hands of fans.

SHOWED TALENT

Their big hit of 1965, Cara Mia, went as high as No. 2 on some of the charts, with the sales of nearly 700,000, and stayed in the Top 10 for 11 weeks. The boys also showed how talented they are by appearing in the summer stock version of Bye Bye Birdie in Chicago. They were all written into the play with special parts.

Also, Jay and his boys made a cameo appearance in their first movie, Snow Ball, singing pop tunes. In a wide sweep to capture audiences of all ages, they also appeared on the Tonight show.

Since the boys are in their 20's, they're looking to the future with a staying-power act that incorporates some comedy as well as a hint of an adult touch to their performances.

Today, they're making numerous appearances on college campuses as well as nightclubs and just about every network variety TV show. They sing folk songs, show tunes, pop rock 'n' roll and even mix in a little bit of jazz so that they touch all bases.

LIKE BRITONS

They have great affection too, for the British groups and what they have done for the business. Marty comments:

George Doulour's Galena was sixth.

The other boys scored in the following order: Don Lawson in Sloop Te-Pah; D. J. Evans in 28-foot Herreshoff, II; A. A. Stuart Law in Sloop Trio; John Weir in Thunderbird, Aureola and Louis Lindholm in Onna.

But he failed to move me until after sentence of banishment is passed. Then, and not till then, was he believable. The reason seems to be that this actor only really comes alive when in action.

The part of Mercutio is a cruelly unfair to that of Romeo. Give this over to a more competent actor and he'll always steal the show. And that's what happened last night.

MAGNIFICENT — J. C. Juliano was magnificent. He charged the part with lusty life and bawdy humor, and his death in the big duel scene left a gap never adequately filled.

With 11 years of experience already under his belt, this is one Canadian actor who must surely have a big future in wider fields.

50 Cents Removes 11 Homes on Hospital Site

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

A Victoria firm has been awarded a 50-cent contract for the demolition of 11 houses near Royal Jubilee Hospital, where a $6,000,000 provincial government psychiatric hospital is to be built soon.

The houses are on Lee Avenue and Trent Street, just east of the hospital. Two more houses there, still occupied, are to be torn down later.

Highest bidder on the project was Oliver Equipment, which wanted $5,980 to tear down the 11 buildings. But the government awarded its contract to Apex Demolition, which it will pay 50 cents for the job.

'LOWEST'

Public Works Minister Chant said in the corridor of the legislature Tuesday: "This is the lowest bid I have seen. I understand the company wants to move some of the houses and sell them."

He did not say when the ground-breaking ceremony for the mental hospital would take place, but public works officials said last month that once the houses were removed, "work will be continuous from then on."

'BIG THING'

The six-story building which is to be erected on this site will house an intensive treatment unit for Vancouver Island's mental patients.

Health Minister Martin also said in the corridor of the legislature Tuesday that "it's a big thing—it's the start of a very large project for the purpose of providing intensive treatment and outpatient services to the mentally ill."

"This project required a great deal of preparation in programming and designing, as well as finding a suitable location," he said.

"It is with a great deal of pleasure that the government has now been able to commence construction of a facility which will contribute a great deal to the alleviation of mental health (problems) on southern Vancouver Island."

Marble Marks
Taken
By PTA Idea

Some of the tiny tots at Tillicum Elementary School were losing their marbles until one of the teachers stopped it Tuesday.

"There's nothing official about it," said the teacher, John Walker. "I just told the bigger children it wasn't a very sporting way to play marbles."

The game in question is played with a rectangle of cardboard, called a jyp board. It is set vertically on the ground and the object of the game is to roll marbles through square holes at the bottom. Large holes will pay two or three marbles, small holes will pay more. Marbles that don't go through become the property of the board owner.

Two 11-year-old lads who had their boards confiscated, then returned after school, posed with their winnings last night.

Ray Wright, 3149 Milgrove, and Chad Craigen, 3548 Tillicum, said they had won 2,000 marbles in three days. They paid out $30.

There were about 20 pupils at the school using the marble boards, they said.

Mr. Walker said he thought the boys should confine their marble board game to places away from the school grounds.

The father of one of the boys said his son thought it was a great game but agreed the odds were loaded in favor of the house.

Mr. Walker added a drill note. "I think they got the idea from a school PTA fair a couple of years ago," he said, "but they used ping pong balls."

Esquimalt Engineer Hits
Fire Chief's 'Knocking'

By BOB PETHICK

If the View Royal panhandle amalgamates with Esquimalt it could have sewers within 18 months, a meeting of 65 rate-payers was told Tuesday night.

Esquimalt municipal engineer John Graeme told the meeting it would depend on panhandle residents as to how long it would take sewers to be installed.

The orderly meeting was told:

● There would be no overall change in taxes due to amalgamation.

● The fire insurance on industrial property was higher in Esquimalt than View Royal although View Royal has a volunteer fire department.

● Boundaries of the panhandle had been formed by using a section line that ran from water to water.

● There were two police cars (station wagons) that were equipped as ambulances and would be available to panhandle.

● The water board became involved in the question when there was a threat that the city might lose its water rights to the lake.

THREAT PASSED

With this threat hanging over its head, the city met Saanich representatives and discussed the possibility of the board taking over the lake as a safeguard against the city losing its rights.

DEPARTMENTS

A near flare-up occurred when View Royal fire chief Al Beasley asked Mr. Graeme if Esquimalt had a fire department when its police department was busy. A combined police-fire department is run by the police.

Mr. Graeme retorted the department had taken runs at posted speeds in View Royal and had been able to reach destinations in 2½ minutes.

He said in his 13 years in the municipality he had never known Esquimalt's police department to knock other police departments or fire department to knock other fire departments.

When asked if they wished to speak about ball, Gable said: "Not at the moment."

Chief Gregory and Detective Inspector William Andrews paid tribute Tuesday to the co-operation received from local and mainland forces.

Insp. Andrews said he had never seen co-operation "like this in all my life."

Both were then remanded to March 1. Gable will then be asked to elect, and a date will be set for Braumberger's preliminary hearing.

When asked if they wished to speak about ball, Gable said: "Not at the moment."

Second Pair Hunted in Bank Raid

Two Men Face Court

Two men appeared in central magistrate's court Tuesday charged with Friday's armed bank robbery and police issued names and description of two other men.

In court were William Braumberger, 45, and Henry Gable, 46. No pleas were taken.

Wanted are Gordon Francis Duck, 23, and Harold Robison Coulter, 47. Both are described as being from the East Coast.

DESCRIPTORS

Duck is five feet, nine inches tall, weighs 175 pounds and has brown hair. Police Chief J. F. Gregory said Monday.

Coulter is five feet, nine inches, weighs 150 pounds and has dark hair.

The charges followed Friday night's lightning robbery of the Bank of Montreal, 1771 Fort, when three masked, armed men stole $19,342.

NABBED IN VANCOUVER

Warrants were issued Monday.

Braumberger and Gable were arrested Monday in Braumberger's home in the Grandview district of Vancouver.

City detectives Lorne Johnson and Jack Mason made the arrests in conjunction with Vancouver policemen.

Braumberger had difficulty understanding his rights before Magistrate William Ostler.

He was told he could elect to be tried by a magistrate, by a judge or by a judge and jury.

The short, mustached Braumberger said, when asked if he understood his rights: "Not entirely, no."

Magistrate Ostler repeated the options twice more, and Braumberger then said he wanted a trial before a judge and jury.

ASKED REMAND

Water Board Take-Over?

Parkland PlanBy A. H. MURPHY
City Hall Reporter

A Victoria-Saanich agreement on the 700-acre city-owned Elk-Beaver Lake parkland struck a snag Tuesday—on which it may founder.

Saanich representatives left a morning meeting of the two municipalities obviously nettled at the city's refusal to go along with a pact which has been under discussion for months.

Later in the day, at a meeting of the Greater Victoria Water District, and over the strenuous objections of Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay, the city pushed through a motion to explore the possibility of the board taking over the parkland.

Specifically, Water Commissioner Ronald Upward was ordered to report on the feasibility of the water district taking over (a) the Elk-Beaver Lake Park area (b) Thetis Lake Park and (c) a combination of both.

The whole possibility of the water board taking over the Elk-Beaver tract was explored eight years ago and rejected, said Reeve Cox.

"It is ridiculous that people be asked to buy this and with their water bills, particularly in view of the fact that the new capital region board is well set up to acquire parkland. If it should go anywhere, it should go there," the reeve added.

TIMES CHANGE

Commissioner Upward admitted eight years ago that he was flat against the board owning the areas, but added that circumstances had changed somewhat since then.

He was adamant, however, on the fact that the water board shunned the very thought of maintaining parkland. Mayor Toone said this work could be done on contract with adjacent municipalities.

The Saanich agreement, based on proposals made in 1965, envisaged the city-owned area being administered by a joint Victoria-Saanich board.

In return for the city's pledge to dedicate the area as parkland, Saanich was prepared to pay for maintenance and development at the rate of about half a mill a year ($580,000 over a decade).

The water board became involved in the question when there was a threat that the city might lose its water rights to the lake.

THREAT PASSED

With this threat hanging over its head, the city met Saanich representatives and discussed the possibility of the board taking over the lake as a safeguard against the city losing its rights.

However the provincial government denied any jurisdiction in the matter or rights to the lake and the threat apparently passed.

But not the idea of the water board taking over.

'ADVANTAGES'

"There are certainly some advantages," said Mayor Toone at the morning meeting Tuesday.

"It would be an easy and practical way to raise funds and it would involve all of the people in the district," he added.

"Just what has gone wrong?" asked Reeve Curtis. "Is something wrong with the agreement we propose?"

EXPLORATION

The mayor said he merely wanted to explore the water board idea. If it was rejected, the city was always willing to return to the original Saanich plan.

"The city obviously wants money for this land. This is the nub of the matter, is it not?" the reeve asked.

Of Marmots

By JIM BRAHAN

An invasion of rural Saanich by High Andes marmots is not expected to take place—and it's not because of the scarcity of chokecherry pits.

A Victoria realtor has advertised for acreage in Saanich for a Peruvian family who wish to raise the rare marmots within the municipality.

"Keep those crazy things out of Saanich," a worried ratepayer said.

He said the municipality has enough troubles now with nematodes, earwigs, and a mixed-up garbage disposal system.

"If a couple of the animals ever escape from their pens the whole countryside would be swarming with them in no time," he said.

The realtor points out in his advertisement that the Peruvian animal's favorite food is chokecherry pits, it is practically odorless, and having no vocal chords, is practically squeakless.

He also admitted the whole thing was a gag, and he really was in search of property listings in Saanich.

Bastion's Objective

Culture Ice Broken
With Good Laugh

Breaking barriers to the growth of culture with a hearty laugh is the job of Bastion Theatre, the company's artistic director Peter Mannering told the Victoria Electric Club Tuesday.

"A great barrier is that people think of theatre as culture, and culture as Shakespeare and nobody else. Even when we produce a modern comedy, people think it was written by Shakespeare, under a different name," Mr. Mannering said.

He is breaking this barrier with productions like The Boy Friend and he feels he is building a big theatre-going crowd in the process, he said.

"The idea is to present live entertainment as stimulating, exciting, and entertaining, even if it does make you think occasionally."

He said Bastion concentrates on light entertainment.

The Greater Victoria area is an especially fertile spot in the growth of the theatre, Mr. Mannering said.

He said something new will be added to the Victoria theatre scene with the production of Three Parts Benedict, by Victoria playwright Patrick O'Neill.

Three Parts Benedict is a comedy which goes on stage March 26 and 28, and March 30 to April 2.

The production in Victoria of a Victoria writer's work indicates a trend in Canada towards regional entertainment, with various theatre centres producing work which reflects life in their own home areas, Mr. Mannering said.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

When the New Year's Honors list was made public one British newspaper stated that British Empire Medal winner, Miss Winnifred Farmer was just one, ordinary-seeming name on the list.

But went on "Yet she is one of the most remarkable women in the country."

And when Miss Farmer wrote to Mrs. S. D. Jenkins, Goldstream Road, this is what she had to say:

"Now for the exciting news. The Queen has awarded me the Order of The British Empire Medal. I have had a letter from the Prime Minister and my name has been on the radio and in the daily paper. I am so thrilled but don't know why I am the lucky one."

I will have to go to Buckingham Palace for The Queen to pin on the medal. Can you imagine it?"

Winnifred Farmer who lives in a little whitewashed cottage in Kent, came to Victoria two years ago to visit her brother-in-law and sister, the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Harding on Leigh Road. And she made many friends here, among them Mrs. Jenkins.

After reading her story you'll understand only too readily why Miss Farmer was so honored.

Quoting excerpts from a British newspaper in an article written by Rhona Church, here it is:

"I'm a nobody. I can't think why I have been given a medal."

"The love of these children is enough reward."

Thus said Miss Farmer on receiving the medal for spending 21 years successfully foster-mothering four abandoned and handicapped problem children.

Miss Farmer is a warm hearted woman of 67 whose story really begins with the 1914-18 war. It killed her childhood sweetheart and deprived her of children of her own.

The next war gave her a chance to be mother to eight evacuees. She was 41 and a spinster, yet soon she became the woman to whom the billeting officer brought the problem children nobody else would take.

She was desolate when her evacuees left after the war. Then the children's officer brought her Doreen. Doreen was five and had a glass eye. Her mother had disappeared. Her father put her in an orphanage.

The trouble was nobody fancied the job of washing Doreen's glass eye, said Miss Farmer. "She was neglected and retarded and needed the kind of love and care you don't get in an orphanage. I took her in and together we coped."

Next came Peter, brought by the probation officer. He was seven. His mother had reported him out of control and said that he stole.

His mother had left him all day and most of the night in a basement room. He was half starved and had never been to school.

He had been picked up wandering in the streets at night, said Miss Farmer, and morning and The Queen and Prince Philip were scheduled to board their yacht at 5 that afternoon.

The cruise ended in Jamaica where they met Victorians, Mr. and Mrs. J. Villiers Fisher and former Victorians Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Dalton. Kay Dalton was very well known in theatrical circles here. The Daltons now live on Fifth Avenue in New York, right across from Central Park.

Their daughter, Sara has hit the big time in modelling. She models for both Vogue and Harper's Bazaar.

The Daltons' niece, Joanna Pettit, (formerly famous) who also used to live here, has been discovered by the movies. She is playing the lead part as Kay in the movie The Group, to be released in March.

The Daltons were most interested that their cruise ship, the Federal Palm, had been a gift from Canada to the West Indies.

Flying from the islands to Miami, the travellers also made stops at New Orleans, Las Vegas and San Francisco before arriving here.

had been put in a remand home. He was terrified of the police, and the remand home was doing him more harm than good.

He needed love. Miss Farmer provided it.

Then came Rosemary. She was the abandoned baby of an immature mother. She had epilepsy and became so retarded and difficult that she was classified mentally handicapped and placed in an institution.

"She should never have gone there," said Miss Farmer. "And finally they gave her a little girl of 2½—Christine. Christine, a waif, had been sent to three different homes on approval for adoption. Each time she had been handed back after the trial period."

Miss Farmer took her in until another adoptive couple could be found. But when they were Christine cried and cried and would not talk until they took her back to Miss Farmer's cottage, which has been her home ever since.

It was not the kind of a family most women would choose. It was full of problems.

Lots of tantrums, misdeeds and bed-wetting. Never enough money for the little extras the children's school friends took for granted. Difficulties with home work and failure to pass exams.

Miss Farmer took them hopping in the summer and used the money to buy them school uniforms, books and bicycles.

Throughout all those years she also went out clearing in the big house next door, five days a week, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., for £2 ($6) so that her children could have jam and cakes, toys and treats.

"I felt that loving them was the main thing I could do for them," she said. "So I never told the welfare officer when they were naughty. And I never punished them for things that weren't their fault."

And in time the tantrums, misdeeds and bed-wetting stopped and the children became a close-knit family group, fond and proud of each other.

Peter, who might have become a criminal had he stayed in the remand home, grew into a fine young man, found a job in local government and married.

Rosemary, who might have spent all her days in mental institutions, became an auxiliary nurse and married a policeman.

Doreen, the first to marry, has given Miss Farmer "three smashing grandchildren." She emigrated to Australia last summer.

By this time, Miss Farmer had been to the Palace and have her medal pinned on by the Queen.

The family must be so very proud of their mother.

More than 100 guests attended a reception in the hall of Centennial United Church, Saturday afternoon, arranged to mark the 90th birthday of Mrs. Albert Allison. The party was arranged by her five children, Mrs. J. (Mary) Loundes of Ladue, B.C.; Mrs. Lou (Clara) Karadimas, Deep Cove; Hugh Allison, Edmonton; Carl Allison, Victoria, and Morris Allison, Vancouver.

The honor guest was born in Bloomington, N.B., on February 20, 1876. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Newton McLeod.

With her parents, she moved to Moose Jaw, Sask. at the age of eight, attending the first school in that city and Normal School at Regina. Before she married in 1904, the honor guest taught school in several Saskatchewan communities.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison moved to Victoria in 1908. Mrs. Allison has been an active church worker for most of her life. She joined the Wilkeson Road United in 1911, transferring to Centennial United Church in 1960.

Mrs. Allison still retains her interest in church work, being a member of the Centennial United Church Women's work group and helping to make the many blankets and quilts which the organization sends to overseas missionaries.

Saturday's party came as a great surprise to this alert woman, her family having managed to keep it a secret up to the last moment. Many of her 14 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren were there to help her make it the best birthday party of her life.

Fashions For Spring At Show

A preview of what Victoria women will be wearing this spring will be shown Friday evening when the Macaulay School Parent-Teachers' Association holds a spring fashion show.

The show, beginning at 8 p.m. in Esquimalt Senior Secondary School auditorium, will feature spring styles from Miss Frith's Ladies' Wear, and funds realized will go toward the buying of a primary typewriter for the school. Refreshments will be served and a door prize is offered.

Models will include Mrs. M. Lineham, Mrs. L. Towers and Mrs. S. Brice, teachers; Mrs. A. Nault, Mrs. C. Wright and Mrs. K. Gordon, members, and Miss Lynne Wiegand, a student of Esquimalt Secondary School.

with the same olive green stones set in silver. At right is a Gilles collar necklace of silver with large fuchsia and rose stones. The mask is the same design with etching of small blue zircon stones.—(Fednews)

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing about something that has been on my mind since before Christmas. It's about my little brother, Howard, who is in the second grade.

Howard is a bright, happy little boy. He believed in Santa Claus and his eyes would sparkle when he asked if Santa knew for sure that he had been a good boy so he would stop at our house!

The day before school closed for the Christmas holidays Howard came home in tears. The teacher had told the second graders that there was no Santa Claus—that he was a made-up story-book person, like Alice in Wonderland.

Howard was heartbroken. It was as if he had lost a dear friend. My mother and dad are very upset. They feel that the teacher had no right to do this. What do you say?—SIS

Dear Sis: Some second graders probably knew that Santa Claus was a made-up person because they learned it at home. And home is where they ought to learn it.

It was cruel of the teacher to rob some of the youngsters of their make-believe friend. Fantasy brings children joy. They are a delight and they vanish all too soon.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 26, a college graduate, single, well-heeled, better than average

Roth-Jacura Wedding

Lace Train Enhances Taffeta Gown

A gown of tissue taffeta, styled with a full lace train sweeping back to a diamond point, was worn by Marion Ethel Jacura, Friday evening, when she became the bride of Warren Robert Roth.

The main train extended from two bridal bows at the back waistline of the floor-length gown and similar lace was repeated on the bodice and sleeves. Her veil of silk illusion net, which was softly misted from a floral headpiece, was starred with seed pearls. White gardenias, tipped with turquoise, were in her cascade bouquet.

Pink and white chrysanthemums arranged with plum blossoms decorated St. Aidan's United Church when Rev. A. G. MacLeod heard marriage vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Jacura, 1542 Mt. Douglas Cross Road, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Roth, 208 Ontario Street. The bride's cousin, Maria and Celia Schroeder were soloists during the ceremony, accompanied by another cousin, Frank Schroeder. Mr. Jacura gave his daughter in marriage. Bell-skirted gowns of satin brocade in turquoise tones were worn by the bride's attendants, matron of honor Mrs. Ian McKinnon and bridesmaid Miss Janet Macalister. They accented their outfits with matching floral headpieces and cascade bouquets of salmon pink carnations. James Roth was best man for his brother. Ushering guests to their pews were Barry Macaulay and Howard Jacura.

Leslie Smith proposed the toast to the bride at the reception following in the Olde England Inn. A three-tier wedding cake centred the head table. The couple will make their home at 1725 Emerson Street.

The new Mrs. Roth's travelling ensemble was a pale green walking suit, complemented with beige accessories and a white carnation corsage.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

It is well known that spades are a highly desirable commodity — so when the opponents hold eight between them and don't bid the suit, certain inferences can be drawn. South used this theory to help him home a contract that might otherwise have got lost.

South's decision to bid game was bold, but he was right. E-W had also been bidding on slender values, since they held only 16 points between them. South therefore realized that West's opening might be well below the usual 13-point minimum — a factor which did not help declarer in his search for the diamond queen. But E-W's strange silence about the spade suit did help him.

After East had won the heart opening with the ace and returned the club jack, declarer rightly decided he had no chance unless the club jack was singleton. He therefore ducked the club lead and the clouds lifted slightly when East shifted to the heart seven. As South, how would you take it from there?

Declarer's heart jack lost to the queen and a third heart knocked out his king. Now unless he located the diamond queen, the contract was down. But South didn't need to guess who had that card; he used a suit the opponents hadn't bid to reveal it plainly. If either opponent held five spades, he'd have bid the suit. That counted West for four spades, three hearts and five clubs — hence only one diamond. A low diamond to the king let declarer finesse against East's diamond queen as if it were an exposed card — which, in a way, it was as if it were an exposed card — which, in a way, it was as if it were an exposed card.

Garden Notes

Soil Too Risky

By M. V. CHESNUT

Away back in the hungry '30s, when I was trying desperately to make a living in drought-stricken Saskatchewan, I tried to start some garden seeds indoors, in tin cans filled with garden soil placed in a sunny living room window.

In my ignorance, I didn't know that the grasshopper plague of the summer before had left the soil full of eggs. When the dirt in the tin cans warmed up from the heat of the room, the eggs hatched out, and pretty soon we found ourselves with a household of small but very hungry grasshoppers.

They ate all my seedling plants and all my wife's houseplants before we realized what had happened, then they started on the living room drapes, leaving them looking more like lace curtains, they even ate a hole in a silk stocking. They got into our clothes and into our hair, and we couldn't even eat a piece of bread without shaking it first.

Ever since we went through that nightmare, I have been soured on the idea of bringing ordinary backyard soil into the house, and especially for starting seeds. Not only is there an excellent chance of hatching out a generation of grubs, slugs, maggots and other assorted pests, but there is an even greater chance of importing disease spores which infect and destroy young seedling plants. One family of diseases in particular, known to gardeners as "damping-off," is very troublesome, attacking baby plants at soil level and rotting the stems until they topple over and die.

One way to cleanse soil for starting seeds is to disinfect it, and this isn't too difficult. It can be done with chemicals such as No-Damp or Pano-Drench, or it can be done with heat. Baking damp soil in a 200-degree oven for one hour will do the trick, or you can toast each shovelful of soil over a garden bonfire until it starts to steam. Watering each pedal of soil before sowing with boiling water, right out of the kettle, will get rid of pests and earthworms, but the heat doesn't last long enough to kill off all disease spores.

Disinfecting soil is a messy business, though, and moreover, you can overdo it, killing off much of the goodness in the soil along with the pests and diseases. Actually, it is much simpler—and I think better—to start your seeds without any soil at all, using one of the soil-less media of mixtures available nowadays.

Seeds can be started without any fuss in peat moss, vermiculite, perlite, or even in clean, damp sand, and mixtures of these materials are even better. Personally, I like a seed-Cornell University and known as the Cornell Mix.

Use 4 quarts peat moss, 4 quarts perlite or vermiculite, 1 tablespoon of superphosphate, 2 tbsps. lime, and 4 tbsps. or 5-10-5 or similar garden fertilizer.

While your seeds are germinating, the mixture should be kept evenly but just barely moist, never soggy wet. There is enough food in the mixture to keep your baby plants going for five weeks, after which they should be given a few drops of liquid fish, liquid whale or liquid seaweed plant food in their water.

Names in the News

Flipping Record Broken

LIBERAL, Kan. — A record-setting sprint by an 18-year-old blonde gave the women of Liberal a one-up edge over the women of Olney, England, in their annual Shrove Tuesday pancake racing competition.

Rachel Cribbs, a receptionist at an aircraft plant, breezed over the finish line of the 415-yard course in one minute 4.5 seconds to win the Liberal leg of the competition — and the international title.

Her time shaded a record-equaling performance turned in earlier in the day by 16-year-old Janet Bunker, who won a similar race in Olney in one minute 5.1 seconds.

Miss Bunker tied the previous record for the event, set in 1955 by Mrs. Blanche Dick of Liberal.

TOKYO — The city of Tokyo will give Indian Mrs. Indira Gandhi a female hippopotamus to mark her election as India's first woman prime minister.

HOLLYWOOD — Film actor John Wayne, 58, has become a father for the seventh time. His wife, Pilar, 37, gave birth to a 6-pound 14½-ounce daughter, Marina Carmel. Wayne has three children by this marriage and four grown children by a previous marriage. He has 10 grandchildren and is expecting two more this spring.

LONDON — Cyril Butterwick, 75, a former Eton College teacher, dropped dead in the state ballroom at Buckingham Palace while waiting for Queen Mother Elizabeth to give his wife, Mrs. Desirée Butterwick, a medal.

COLD SPRINGS, N.Y. — Quadruplets born to hairdresser Ronald Acebal and his 36-year-old wife were reported in good condition in hospital incubators. Mrs. Helen Acebal's three girls and a boy weighed from 2 pounds 9 ounces to 2 pounds 13 ounces.

WOOTTON, England — A grocer named Valentine Day won $198,000 — all tax free — in Britain's soccer pool and promptly announced a free week's supply of groceries for all his customers. Otherwise, he said, he'll continue business as usual.

LONDON — Dr. Serotee Khama, prime minister of Bechuanaland, entered hospital here for a check-up. "This is just to ensure that Dr. Khama's diabetes is under control," a Bechuanaland spokesman said.

NEW YORK — The widow of author Ernest Hemingway has lost in an effort to bar publication of a forthcoming biography of her husband. Supreme Court Judge Harry Frank denied Mary Hemingway an application for JAKARTA — Koti, Indonesia's highest policy-making body, will in future be called the "crush Malaysia command," the Army Minister, Lt.-Gen. Suharto, has announced. Suharto said the command would carry out military operations as part of Indonesia's confrontation against the Malaysian Federation.

RABAT — King Hassan of Morocco reshuffled his cabinet, but retained as interior minister Brig.-Gen. Mohamed Oufkir, accused by French President de Gaulle of arranging the kidnapping in Paris of Moroccan opposition leader Mehdi Ben Barka.

CANTERBURY, England — The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Michael Ramsey, who will visit Pope Paul in Rome March 23, says he will talk to the pontiff about "practical matters which can hurt feelings and consciences" as well as theology.

VATICAN CITY — Archbishop Mario Joseph Lemieux of Ottawa and Archbishop George Bernard Fisher of Winnipeg, were received in separate audiences by Pope Paul.

NELSON — An era ended here with the death of doctor and linguist Mrs. E. V. (Caroline) Morel at the age of 103. Mrs. Morel studied medicine at the University of Heidelberg and served her internship in a Belgian institution in Brussels.

MOSCOW — Yuri Sevidov, former star player of the Moscow Spartak soccer team, was sentenced to 10 years in prison for drunken driving and manslaughter.

ROME — Tito Manlio Manzella, 76, Sicilian-born writer, died after a long illness. Manzella wrote mainly novels.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

$250,000—for Kicks

NEW YORK (NANA) — Poor Richard Burton. He gets into trouble every time he helps someone or something. Like when, with wife Elizabeth Taylor, he did the first Rammy Davis show and was murdered by the critics for his pains. To be true, they were all bad. But Richard needed the show and the panning like the proverbial hole in the head. And now more of the same for his recently completed performance for the Oxford University Drama Society. For the preparation and time for Richard and wife Elizabeth Taylor, it cost them a good $250,000 to perform in Doctor Faustus. They did it to raise money for the drama society which needed it badly.

So again they were slaughtered. Richard was accused of walking through his role by most of the reviewers. It will be a long time, I am sure, before Burton gives his acting talents to do someone a favor. . . . Nonetheless, after reading some of the hideous notices I couldn't help but wonder if Richard remembered, as I did, what Laurence Olivier (or was it Emily Williams?) said at the height of the romantic Roman furor with Miss Taylor: "What do you want to be, an actor or a household word?" "Both," Richard told me he had replied. Perhaps he is learning that this is not quite possible. He seems to have made this choice because, as far as the naked eye can see, he is committed to films, with or without his still stunningly beautiful wife who turns 34 on Sunday.

After The Taming of the Shrew the Burtons will be back in Hollywood where Richard is set to star with Audrey Hepburn in a musical version of Mr. Chips. . . . During the five months of filming Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? they grew to love Hollywood all over again, and they will buy a home in the film capital and live in it for several months of each year, making side trips to their home in Puerto Vallarta.

They hope to make one picture a year in Hollywood, they told a chum on the set of Virginia Woolf, where between takes Richard kidded Elizabeth: "I'm finally making as much money as you are." He will be paid $1,000,000 against a percentage of Mr. Chips. For this picture, Burton had asked that Miss Hepburn would be better for the part. And the actor was finally convinced, after he had stated, "All I know is I don't want my wife."

Elizabeth makes no secret that she does not want to act with anyone but her husband. Since the marriage she has made every one of her films with him. In actual fact she is far more interested in his career than her own, which she would willingly abandon, except for the fact that, until now, her appearances with Burton (who is better as a stage actor than on film) have been beneficial to his movie career. Also, she likes to work with him. She has been able to help him with make-up and camera angles, but not in the acting department. In this area he can still act rings and rings around her, although Elizabeth, when she gets the right role, can be very good — as in A Place in the Sun, and Cat On A Hot Tin Roof.

It was with Richard's amused agreement that Elizabeth added 20 to 30 pounds for her part as Martha in Virginia Woolf. There was no reason for the professor's wife to be fat. The idea was that she should not be too pretty and Lis pounced on the added weight as a way to deglamourize. She succeeded. But seeing those photographs as the immortal Helen, she was right when she said, "I can always lose weight when I want to." How did she get fat? Oh, with milkshakes, mashed potatoes and butter. It's as easy as falling off a log.

How do they work together? They don't learn their lines together, although it would be natural to discuss the roles at home. But there is usually so much going on there with all the children, the maids and the secretaries, I wonder how it is possible to learn anything. Richard still takes his acting seriously. I am curious about their future.

Island Teams Reach For the Top

By PETER TAYLOR
NANAIMO—Island North defeated Oak Bay and Island Central whipped Nanaimo in Reach for the Top playdowns here Tuesday.

Korean Force Doubling?

SEOUL (Reuters)—U.S. Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey arrived here Tuesday amid reports that South Korea is prepared to double its troop commitment to South Viet Nam.

Humphrey arrived from the Philippines on another leg of his Asian and Far East tour to discuss the Viet Nam war with national leaders.

South Korea already has 20,000 troops in South Viet Nam and the government was reported ready to send another 20,000.

DOUBLE FORCE
South Korea has been asked by South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky to double its contribution to the Viet Cong guerrillas.

All aspects of the war will be covered today when Humphrey confers with President Chung-hee Park after meetings with Premier Chung Il Kwon and Foreign Minister Ton Won Lee. Humphrey's tour already has taken him to South Viet Nam, Laos, Thailand, India, Pakistan, Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines.

GEORGE ALLY
"It's natural that we should consult since this country, always a close friend and ally, is contributing so much to the common struggle," the vice-president said on his arrival.

Asked why the U.S. resumed bombing North Viet Nam after a long suspension, he said:

"We have done this, not because we wish to destroy the livelihood of the North Vietnamese people, but because to continue the bombing pause would have increased the peril to soldiers—including your own—who are fighting in the south."

Corps de Ballet For Swan Lake

By JIM BRAHAN

The loneliest swan in Saanich—the Swan Lake—won't be lonely after 9:30 a.m. today, when it gets three playmates.

Interested employees in nearby Saanich municipal hall are going to watch the feathered foursome to see if they form a sewing circle, a poker club or mixed doubles.

The three newcomers are too young for their sex to be determined by mere humans.

Inquest Set

NANAIMO—An Inquest will open at 4 p.m. today into the death of Lavina Henry, 19, Alert Bay.

The woman was found dead on a bed at a house on Shoreline Drive, Nanaimo Indian reserve.

Coroner Russ Inkster said he had originally planned only an inquiry, but later decided to hold an inquest.

After the viewing of the body this afternoon the jury will adjourn for a week to 10 days.

Tammy's Tattoo Ends Pound Visit

A short story in Tuesday's Colonist brought a check in SPCA cages, and a lost dog was returned to its owners Tuesday.

Now safe at home is Tammy, a valuable Brittany spaniel belonging to Todd Noble, 1256 Oakmount.

Tammy, a spayed female, spent the last few days in SPCA cages with a motley crowd of male strays.

Just how Tammy ended up

VICTORIA GIFT
Saanich parks and recreation committee chairman Edward Lum, on behalf of the municipality, will receive the birds as a gift from the Victoria parks department.

The young swans will be put into the lake from the end of Haynes Road.

HAPPY BIRTH
As the enclosure is not equipped with a pool, caretaker Harry Hayton kept a small area flooded with a garden hose to keep the birds happy.

He said one big drawback to the pond was that Queenie, the veteran park horse, took possession of the pond and chased the swans out.

TWO SHOT
With the three additional birds, Swan Lake's swan population will be back up to its original four.

Two of the originals were shot by vandals, who were apprehended by Saanich police, and the third swan died from undetermined causes.

After the viewing of the body this afternoon the jury will adjourn for a week to 10 days.

The woman died Saturday night.

Now safe at home is Tammy, a valuable Brittany spaniel belonging to Todd Noble, 1256 Oakmount.

Tammy, a spayed female, spent the last few days in SPCA cages with a motley crowd of male strays.

Just how Tammy ended up in the male cages is a mystery. SPCA director David Beeching said Tuesday.

"The inspector told me she must have been picked up with a group of male dogs. I've got to have a talk with him," Mr. Beeching chuckled.

Tuesday morning's story on Tammy mentioned a tattoo on her ear. The inspector did some checking, and in a few minutes the other dogs were deprived of Tammy's company.

Cadets from the Canadian Services Colleges, Royal Roads, will be asked to accompany the queens to the two festival balls.

It was pointed out that the Daffodil Queen would be facing a strenuous week during the festival, and everything should be done to spare her any extra exertion.

House Embattled On Pollution Issue

By BARRY JOHNSON

An NDP member warned Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell he would be held responsible if a government-grounded pollution debate was not re-introduced in the legislature, and triggered the longest burst of opposition desk thumping of the session.

Statements by Randolph Harding of Kulo-Slocan also launched a pitched battle between Premier Bennett and opposition leader Robert Strachan.

Mr. Harding said the government, led by the premier, last Thursday "callously, unfairly and deliberately" killed a motion on pollution control.

"RESPONSIBLE"

He warned Mr. Campbell that the minister has already lost 24 hours and said: "If that motion isn't re-introduced you are going to be the member held responsible in this House."

"That is not the proper way to run a government department with regard to the pollution problem," he said as opposition benches launched a thunderous desk-thumping applause.

Over the din Mr. Campbell and Mr. Education Minister Peterson yelled that the member for Alberni, John Squire, had called the motion a "sop".

"THIRD TIME"
Mr. Squire leaped to his feet and charged: "That is the third time the minister has told a falsehood in this house."

He (and the Speaker William Murray) ignored cries of "withdraw" from government benches.

"There they sit," said Mr. Harding. "You killed it and you haven't the backbone to bring it back into the house."

FRIDAY HASSLE

The next outburst came as Mr. Harding referred to a House hassle Friday in which Mr. Bennett is reported to have threatened an election if the speaker did not see a technical point his way.

"In all fairness to the premier, I think he is starting to show the strain," he said. "I don't think this is good for the premier, the House or the province."

He then referred to a "press conference" Monday morning to which the premier allowed only one reporter after summoning the press gallery.

"THAT'S NOT RIGHT"

The premier looked at Mr. Harding, shook his head several times in the negative, saying, "That's not right."

The premier then rose on a point of personal privilege and said the opposition members failed to return to the house when it resumed at 8 p.m. Friday.

He said the speaker wasn't in his seat because he was waiting for the opposition.

"OBSTRUCTION"

"We were in our seats, you're darn right we were," said Mr. Strachan.

"Obstruction, obstruction," called the premier growing more agitated.

He finally leaped to his feet and called: "I'll bet you 100 to one the OCF were not in their seats at 8 p.m."

Pensioners 'Will Strike' For Passes

By JACK FREY

Legislative Reporter

Victoria MLA Donald Smith threatened in the legislature Tuesday night that old age pensioners will "go on strike" unless B.C. Hydro starts selling them $1 a week bus passes with no restrictive hours.

In a speech that ended at 11:30 p.m. with the Sacred MLA telling the House his party will "take to the hustings and will tell the people" that the opposition has consistently opposed the homeowner grant, Mr. Smith said he has become impatient with the "shadow boxing" handling of the bus pass problem.

"This is the 10th anniversary of the bus pass issue," he said, in recommending that the government try the $1 per week bus passes.

NO RESTRICTIONS
These passes should not be restricted to any special hours although there could be a request that they not be used during the rush hour, said Mr. Smith.

The pensioners are prepared to go on strike to gain their rights," he said, adding that they will be out on strike in the near future if necessary, to back up their demand.

WARNS HOUSE
"They thought they had trouble in New York with a strike, but to be ungrammatical, you ain't seen nothing yet," he warned the House.

"Hear, hear," shouted NDP and Liberal members, thumping their desks in support, while most of the Conservatives remained silent.

"Come on over here, you don't belong over there," called Gordon Dowding (NDP, Burnaby).

Hurn Promoted

Appointment of David E. Hurn as regional supervisor of the newly-formed Okanagan region of the provincial fish and game branch was announced Tuesday.

Mr. Hurn, who has been with the department of recreation and conservation for 14 years and was the regional fisheries biologist at Nanaimo, has gone to Penticton.

He will be responsible for the protection and management of the fish and wildlife resources of the Okanagan region, which includes Penticton, Grand Forks, Princeton, Kelowna and Vernon.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly blots disappear—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Welfare Minister Wreley Black will be the first speaker when the legislature sits at 2 p.m. today. He will be followed by Leo Nimdek (NDP, Cranbrook), Bert Price (BC, Vancouver-Burrard) and Dudley Little (BC, Skeena).

Tight Money

Ottawa Stifling B.C.-Chant

Ottawa is killing the goose that laid the golden egg by imposing tight money policies on British Columbia which brings foreign money into the nation, Public Works Minister Chant told the legislature Tuesday night.

He blamed banking circles in Toronto and Montreal for bringing in tight money policies which are strangling industrial expansion in B.C. and blamed the federal government for allowing them to do it.

Instead of reinvigorating at a time when money is scarce, Canada should be synchronizing its monetary system to "a modern, power-producing, automated age," the minister told the House.

Social Credit, he said, "came up with the essence of an idea of what needs to be done" but that "if socialism were in the saddle in this country, conditions would be even worse than under the Liberals because they would run the country into debt."

Ottawa would have no hesitation in pouring $1,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000 into a war effort, but they say peacetime operations cannot be financed, charged Mr. Chant.

Heckled by North Vancouver millionaire MLA Gordon Gibson, the public works minister chided that if he is "not wise enough to see what is happening (financially) in Canada today, he should sit down and be quiet."

Mr. Chant told the House he remembers living through the "dirty 30s" and doesn't want to see those times ever come again.

He said there are a great many industrial operations in this country which could be financed "within our boundaries" if the government would only make the money available.

Crisp Bills

No Jelly
Inside
This Box

From the outside, it looked like an ordinary jelly box. Inside were 56 crisp King George 1937 $20 bills.

Lucky receiver was the Salvation Army, which got the $1,120 parcel in its mail Monday.

A return address on the parcel had been scrubbed out. Brig. Ronald Frewing said Tuesday.

The Army doesn't know who the donor was. Police are checking to make absolutely sure the money isn't a relic of some past crime.

The money is still legal currency, and will go toward the Army's Red Shield campaign once it has been checked out.

Hopes Fade
For 13
On Fishboat

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The owners of the Newfoundland fishing vessel Blue Mist II said Tuesday night they had abandoned all hope for the safety of the vessel and her crew of 13.

A spokesman for Bonaville Cold Storage Ltd. of St. John's said the company was convinced the vessel had gone down Friday night with 200,000 pounds of fish in her holds.

The spokesman did not elaborate.

A search for the vessel and survivors was to continue today.

SEARCH CONTINUES
An Air-Sea Rescue Centre spokesman here said five aircraft were in the search Tuesday and six or seven would be pressed into the hunt at dawn today.

Meantime, the coast guard ships John A. Macdonald and the Montcalm, the fisheries vessel Cape Freels and Bonaville's trawler Grand Monarch moved to the area, 50 miles off Newfoundland's southwest coast where the lifeboats were spotted.

Atomic About-Face Scored

OTTAWA (CP)—Claiming that he wants to "keep the record straight," Opposition Leader Diefenbaker blasted Defence Minister Hellyer in the Commons Tuesday for changing his mind on nuclear weapons after the United States urged their adoption.

The opposition leader, speaking for the first time during debate of 1965-66 defence spending estimates, said Mr. Hellyer had set himself up as the one man able to see what Canada needs for defence. (See also Page 7).

Because of this, Mr. Diefenbaker said, "a review of some of the statements he made in the past... would not be remiss, because he was just as certain then as he is now."

PRE-ELECTION STAND
Mr. Diefenbaker then proceeded to read portions of Mr. Hellyer's Commons statements made before the 1963 election that saw the Conservative government defeated. Much of the campaign was fought on the nuclear arms issue.

Mr. Hellyer had condemned in 1961 acquisition of the Bomarc nuclear anti-aircraft missile and the Voodoo jet interceptor, Mr. Diefenbaker said. Then he quoted from a Feb. 4, 1963, Commons debate in which Mr. Hellyer said: "... As of this date I have changed my mind."

He referred to newspaper columns telling of how the U.S. ambassador to Canada had briefed reporters on the American view that Canada should accept nuclear weapons under the North American Air Defence Agreement.

DENY
"I wonder whether the minister was not one of those students who received the inoculation that brought about the change of viewpoint and heart. I ask him to deny that and say he was not in touch with Mr. (Livingston) Merchant, the United States ambassador."

Canada the hypodermic treatment on Canada's policy," Mr. Diefenbaker shot back.

Mr. Diefenbaker then read from newspaper articles in April of 1963 in the French-language publication Cite Libre. He said they were written by the parliamentary secretary to the prime minister — an obvious reference to Pierre Elliott Trudeau (L — Montreal Mount Royal), a new guard Liberal elected last November.

From an article on the 1963 defeat of the Conservative gov-

Trigger BroadSides

LONDON (CP) — Defence Minister Denis Healey triggered the biggest blowup since Labor came to power when he announced Tuesday a reduced role for the Royal Navy in Britain's future defence.

Election talk flew after Healey told the Commons of the Socialist government's decision for purchase of United States warplanes and against construction of a new aircraft carrier.

Admiral Sir David Luce, 60, first sea lord, announced his "early retirement" — tantamount to resignation — following the steps of Navy Minister Christopher Mayhew, 50, who resigned Saturday. A defence department spokesman said there was no known precedent to Sir David's action and certainly none in this century.

Mayhew, in a personal statement to the House, declared that "proposed cuts in resources are not matched by proposed cuts in commitments."

"And the result will be a strain on the armed forces of dependence on the United States beyond what this House should accept."

This was music in the ears of Tory Opposition Leader Edward Heath, who scoffed at Healey's statement that his defence white paper, which followed a 14-month review, was "essentially an exercise in political and military realism."

"What you are doing is to reduce the amount of the gross national product spent on defence which... does not consider the defence of this country or its position in the world," said Heath.

The purchase of 50 U.S. F-111s was described by the government as a stop-gap measure until a new English-French

Defence May Sound Retreat by '69

The Great Albatross Hunt

By RON COLLETER
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The government may kill four albatrosses in one big retreat in defence.

If the plan works out, it will:

- End Canada's air role in Europe by 1969.
- Take out of the front line the Starfighter nuclear-strike plane, which is now considered a "suicide plane" in some European countries.

- Head off the confrontation with French President de Gaulle, due in 1969, over who will command foreign units in France under NATO.

- Put Canada clearly on the road to becoming a non-nuclear nation.

Because it is such a huge, all-encompassing plan, it is called just a possibility in official circles here.

But it has everything going for it.

At present, Canada has six squadrons in Germany and two in France.

The German squadrons are being converted to conventional as well as the nuclear role.

The French squadrons already have a purely reconnaissance role.

The plane is an albatross for the defence department. It was the ideal plane in the first place. But as the project moved along, it was difficult to dump the plane, which was accepted with modifications.

So much money was invested in the project. About $800-

000,000 for the planes, trainers and salaries.

And about a billion dollars to equip it for the whole nuclear strike role, including lengthened runways, nuclear warheads and security.

With such an investment,

the program continued, but it was considered an odd role for Canada.

As one reliable source here put it:

"No one liked the role that Canada picked up with the Starfighter."

"It is a role that equipped us to throw big nuclear bombs behind the Iron Curtain."

"But why? U.S. Defence Secretary McNamara says the U.S. has 5,000 tactical nuclear weapons in Europe, and that doesn't include Polaris. Min-

Satellite

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three University of British Columbia science students and a federal government biologist hope to convert sound signals from a U.S. satellite into pictures that will help forecast B.C.'s weather.

They have built an antenna and a receiving set in a former Royal Canadian Air Force building at Vancouver airport, and they hope to receive signals from the U.S. weather satellite Eos II, to be launched Friday.

The sounds will be fed into a facsimile machine which will produce a weather picture every three minutes.

Working on the project are students David Sloan, Donald Inthar and Peter Kulji, and biologist Bryan Fraser.

"We hope to get pictures from an altitude of 200 miles, Mr. Fraser said.

The pictures will show cloud formation and other data over an area 2,000 miles long and nearly 1,000 miles wide.

Ousted in Syria

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian President Amin Hafez and the moderate government of Premier Salah Bitar were ousted today in a military coup staged by extremist army elements inside Syria's ruling Baath party, Damascus radio reported.

MOSCOW (CP) — The Soviet Union launched two dogs into space Tuesday in a project that may eventually place dogs on or in orbit around the moon.

An official announcement said the dogs were orbiting the earth every 96 minutes in the 110th satellite of the Cosmos series.

CLOTHING
One or both of them may be testing protective garb for deep-space travel and an eventual try to place dogs and then men on the moon.

The dogs are named Veterok (Breeze) and Ugolok (Little Coal Nut).

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the satellite carries a radio transmitter operating on a frequency of 15.894 kilocycles.

SPACE DEATH?
Tass said Cosmos CX would reach 561 miles at its highest point and 116 miles at its lowest.

It is the first in the Cosmos series to carry living creatures. Satellites in this series do not usually return to earth and there was no indication the dogs would be brought back alive.

Space experiments with animals date back to the early days of Soviet space orbits.

Nov. 3, 1957, the Soviets launched Sputnik II, carrying a live dog, Laika, as the world's first space passenger. Soviet authorities announced the dog's death seven days later. Sputnik II disintegrated the following April.

Obote

Power in Uganda
All in One Hand

KAMPALA (AP)—Prime Minister Milton Obote announced Tuesday he has assumed "all the powers of the government of Uganda" and arrested five members of his cabinet.

He said from now on he will rule with advice from a council "whose members I shall name later."

The prime minister, 42, said he acted independently and for "the wishes of the people of this country for peace, order and prosperity."

Obote said the five ministers had been "put under detention, pending an investigation into their activities."

Reports said the ministers were arrested by a special police paramilitary unit and identified them as Minister of State Grace Bisingira; B. K. Kitya, minister of water and mineral resources; Health Minister R. B. S. Lumu; Agriculture Minister M. M. Ngobi, and George Magezi, housing and labor minister.

Tramp, Tramp, Tramp of Little Feet

OTTAWA (CP) — The case of the pre-teen soldiers was explained to the Commons Tuesday by Defence Minister Hellyer.

"They enrolled under age," he told a gaping opposition. The defence minister gave the names of six servicemen who, he said, were all under 13 when they joined between 1926 and 1933.

The question came up, during debate on the defence estimates as a result of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's recent report.

Mr. Henderson said the six servicemen retired last year with records that indicated they were 9, 11 or 12 when they joined.

R. G. L. Fairweather (P.C. Royal) suggested this couldn't be true.

Mr. Hellyer said the minimum enlistment age when they joined was 13 and they had "enrolled under age."

"Like my honorable friend and myself, they must have been big boys," he told Mr. Fairweather.

"These people did serve and are entitled to benefits under the law."

Mr. Fairweather said that "as one who enrolled at 17"

he could understand this. But a husky nine-year-old?

Mr. Hellyer identified the six servicemen as Wing Cmdr. W. G. Taylor, Ft. Sgt. J. C. Baker, Lt.-Col. W. M. Alton, Maj. R. W. Hampton, Sgt. D. O. Hogkisson and Ft. Sgt. C. F. Page. He did not mention their home towns.

Mr. Hellyer said four of the men were approaching their 13th year when they enlisted and one was "almost 10."

Mr. Hellyer asked whether all six couldn't be brought before the house committee on defence, expected to sit shortly, to go into detail on their experience.

Admitted Strangler Given Life Sentence

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—A jury Tuesday night found confessed strangler James C. Cross Jr. guilty of murdering University of Texas coed Susan Rigby and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

The jury deliberated one hour over Cross' sentence after deciding earlier in the evening that he was guilty of the crime and that he was sane.

Cross, who had remained stoically silent during the trial, broke into a large grin when the sentencing was announced. He shook his head as if to indicate great relief.

SHAKES HANDS

Cross, who admitted he strangled Miss Rigby and her college roommate Shirley Ann Stark last summer, shook hands with his lawyers, and then was taken immediately above the courtroom to the county jail.

Lawyers for Cross, as they had promised to do if their client was sentenced to life in prison, said they would not appeal the verdict.

HALF-HEARTED

District Attorney Tom Blackwell, who early in the trial had said he would demand the death penalty for Cross, made only a half-hearted appeal for the death penalty during the final arguments.

In his climactic summation to the jury, Blackwell said "The facts testify and demand the death penalty," but that life in prison would "be acceptable" if the jurors felt there were mitigating circumstances.

Defence lawyer Charles Burton said the life sentence was what both Cross and his parents had hoped for.

MOTHER OUT

Cross' mother, who had stayed with her son during the trial, said she was not feeling well, and retired from the courtroom before the verdict was read. His father, however, was present.

Under the newly-passed Texas criminal code, the jury first decided if Cross was guilty or not guilty, and then heard a "pre-sentencing hearing" before deciding his fate.

The 11-man, one-woman jury first deliberated two and one-half hours before deciding Cross was guilty and was sane. Then they heard four character witnesses testifying in behalf of Cross and listening to the final arguments from the prosecution and defence.

'Give Support To Avoid 1966 Election'

Trade Minister Lofmark warned the opposition Tuesday, in the legislature against further "obstruction," because such moves could become election issues.

He said there is "real concern" among the opposition that there will be an election this year.

"If you want to avoid an election," he told them, "begin supporting this government's policies."

Mr. Lofmark said the federal government should foster the building of a merchant fleet instead of curtailing the shipping industry.

Such curtailment also shackled the exporting industries of Canada, he said.

"Such a fleet is the long arm that renders a country able to reach into markets of the world," he said.

SHACKLE

He said it doesn't make sense that Canada should abandon shipbuilding — such a policy is the "largest shackles on Canadian international trade."

He repeated his call for equalized harbor charges in Vancouver to put the West Coast port on an equal basis in competing with those in Eastern Canada.

He did not agree with a federal "discriminatory" policy toward the Vancouver harbor that made shipping $2,000 to $4,000 more costly than in other ports.

COMPLAINTS JUSTIFIED

Arvid Lundell (SC, Revelstoke) told the House that he believes some complaints are justified from people being displaced in his riding by development on the Columbia River.

He said many people accepted B.C. Hydro and Power Authority offers for their land with "resignation" but were unhappy in their hearts.

Anti-Red To Send More Tapes

NEW YORK (AP) — A 27-year-old psychologist, who describes himself as a "patriotic anti-communist," said Tuesday that he will continue sending tape recordings to radio Hanoi advising U.S. soldiers in Vietnam to "disassociate themselves from the illegal war."

Ronald Ramsey said the broadcasts urge U.S. troops to re-examine their position in a war he says violates the articles of the Geneva conference. Ramsey said he made two tapes Monday and they will be sent to Hanoi despite U.S. government objections.

Your Good Health

By JOSEPH MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking birth control pills for three years. I have been told that I should have discontinued them for four months after taking them for two years, and then should have started over again.

What's your advice? — MRS. J. G.

When the pills were first coming into extensive use, some additional precautions were being taken, such as discontinuing them for a time after two years. One of the questions then was whether, after prolonged use, ovulation (and hence the ability to have children) would resume when the pills were stopped.

Now we know the answer to that. Even after prolonged use, ovulation DOES return to normal. The only way to find the answer to a question like that was to wait and see.

NO NEED TO STOP
By now, use of the birth control pills has continued long enough so we know that there is no need to stop after two years. If you are tolerating the pills satisfactorily, I see no reason for interrupting use of them until you so desire.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you have a diet for stomach ulcers? I also have hemorrhoids.

MRS. W. A.

The way to correct ulcers involves more than just diet, although diet is important, too. And you certainly have my sympathy since you have both ulcers and hemorrhoids. Still, when you understand what these ailments are, and how to handle them, you can almost always get them under control. Maybe not absolutely always, but most of the time.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a daughter, 23, who gets weak spells and shakes, and the only thing that helps her is to eat sugar cubes or candy. She has spoken to a doctor about this but has never been given any medication.

Do you have any idea what could cause this? Should she have blood tests? I am apprehensive. — MRS. M. M.

Yes, I have an idea, but I don't know whether it is right, and can't possibly know without benefit of other information. The difficulty could be hypoglycemia, or low blood sugar, which can be roughly described as the opposite of diabetes.

NOT UNCOMMON

This is not an especially uncommon problem, especially in people who tend to be nervous and high-strung. Possibly the doctor gave her a special diet. Medication is not always necessary for this. Your apprehension is understandable.

But I also think your daughter will be much more comfortable if she has a thorough analysis of her trouble, and a series of blood sugar tests (one form of blood test) would be most enlightening.

J. O. W.: "Primipara" indicates first or firstborn, as a woman who is having her first baby. A technical term. So you can stop worrying. That's all the word means.

Nuclear Policy Assailed

He then read a recent column by Charles Lynch, head of Southern News Service, that said Mr. Merchant, then U.S. ambassador to Canada, had called members of the press corps to a briefing early in 1963 and urged adoption of nuclear weapons by Canada.

After this meeting, said Mr. Diefenbaker, Mr. Hellyer changed his mind on a non-nuclear role for Canada.

"Suddenly he turned over just when the American ambassador was giving the hypodermic to Canada."

Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) said Mr. Hellyer's suggestion that previous defence ministers had been rubber stamps indicated that senior defence advisers furnished them.

Did the minister mean he was going to reject the advice of these men when he said he was not going to be a rubber stamp minister? Or was he implying that the advisers, many of them still in the civil service, had given bad advice?

Instead of attacking previous ministers, Mr. Hellyer should give the Commons the information that it needs, Opposition MPs weren't ready to accept all of his statements just because he made them.

EXPLANATIONS
Mr. Hellyer was asking Parliament to commit itself to a large defence expenditure — a new one in such respects as the CF-18 fighter-bomber and the destroyer escorts program. Mr. Lambert said he wanted an explanation of these matters and "not just glorious generalities."

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) wanted to know what commitments Canada had made at the recent NATO meeting. What progress had been made in phasing Canada out of a nuclear role as promised? Was Canada committed to continue its strike reconnaissance force and if so, for how long?

Mr. Hellyer replied that Canada's NATO role is unchanged for 1966.

It was the militia units which fought the war, he said. The role of the permanent forces was to train these units for fighting.

the Starfighters, but 31 have crashed. West German pilots, who also fly the Starfighter, have called it the "suicide plane" because of the high rate of crash.

At the present rate of attrition, Canada would have to withdraw from the Starfighter role by 1972.

But experts now speculate that it would be better all round if this was brought forward to 1969.

The planes that were left could either be sold to European countries requiring replacements or brought home to Canada and modified for an air defence role.

This idea appeals to those who have to save money in defence.

It would be a clear saving of $100,000,000 a year. This would make more money available for Canada's new role of peace-keeping.

The big political arguments in favor of this solution are these:

French President de Gaulle has warned that NATO units in Europe must come under French command.

This problem would be avoided by the removal of the Canadian squadrons in France.

Prime Minister Pearson, probably before the next general election, would be able to produce evidence that he's scrapping the nuclear-strike planes and keeping his promise to dump nuclear weapons. The arguments are so impressive that the conclusion seems inevitable.

Alberni, Totems Rated

ALBERNI — Alberni Chiefs and Victoria High School Totems will be top-seeded in the Vancouver Island boys high school basketball tournament here Friday and Saturday, but the shadow of Oak Bay hangs over the field.

Chiefs took the up-island tournament last weekend. Totems upset Oak Bay, 31-29, for their first win over Gary Taylor's club in two years.

But the Bays are still the defending B.C. champions, and as such they command more respect than any club in the eight-team draw.

In Friday's opening round, Victoria High plays Chemalut, Alberni meets Mount View, Oak Bay takes on Courtenay and Clarendon faces Nanaimo.

Top three teams go to the B.C. tournament March 10-12 in Vancouver.

Eight Clubs Set Sights On Tourney

Eight Vancouver Island girls' basketball teams will be fighting at Mount View High School Friday and Saturday for the Island's two spots in the B.C. tournament.

Victoria High girls are defending the Vancouver Island championship. First and second teams go to Vancouver March 10, 11, 12 in search of the provincial crown.

In Friday's opening round, Courtenay plays Oak Bay at 5, Qualicum meets Esquimalt at 6:15, Chemalut takes on Vic High at 7:30, and Nanaimo plays Mount View at 8:45.

Play in the double-knockout tournament runs from 9 a.m. Saturday with the final at 8:15.

Veteran's Future with Club Uncertain

By JIM TANG

A rift that has always been there between goalkeeper Al Millar and some of his teammates appears to have widened beyond hope of bridging and it seems likely that the 36-year-old veteran has played his last game of hockey for the Victoria Maple Leafs.

What bridges there were may have been burned yesterday.

General-manager Buck Houle and coach Frank Mario both said last night that Millar is still with the club and that no decision had yet been made on whether Millar or rookie Gary Holland would be in goal at Memorial Arena tonight against Seattle Totems.

Millar, on the other hand, was certain that he had played his last game in a Victoria uniform.

"If they want to pay my salary then I'll stay, but I don't think they will," Millar said yesterday afternoon. "They haven't said anything but the handwriting is on the wall. I don't think you'll see me play here again unless it's in another sweater."

That a simmering situation heated by dislike—that has existed since the Maple Leafs came to Victoria last season—had finally come to a boil became evident last Friday in San Francisco when Millar was replaced by Holland, who had played only part of one period previously this season. First evidence of a rift came early last season when the Leafs got away to a bad start and rookie-goalie Gary Smith was sent out to replace Millar. Millar regained his job after Smith had played seven games and the veteran's fine play was a major factor in the successful late-season drive for a playoff spot. But, Millar believes, the current troubles between himself and some of his teammates are a carryover from last season.

With the Leafs reversing themselves this season and getting away to a tremendous start, all was serene, at least on the surface, until a mid-December trip to San Francisco, where the Leafs lost back-to-back games. Millar feels some of his teammates blamed him because he didn't go to lend a hand to Slesaver, who was handicapped in his bout because his sweater had been pulled over his head by a linesman. In rebuttal Millar says that he was warned by referee Willie Papp to keep out of things and that he didn't see the set-to between Slesaver and Boileau.

Dressing-Room Rumpus

Matters almost came to a head here on Jan. 11 during a game against Portland. Portland's Buckaroo was in the dressing room after a serious dressing-room altercation between the second and third periods. Then came the most recent California trip and, it appears, the trouble really started last Wednesday in Los Angeles when the Blades and the Leafs fought a third-period fight. Aut Erickson paired off with Bill Orban, Bill Shvetz had K-

'Could Have Changed Before'

"I'm not upset because they decided to make a change in goal for the game in San Francisco," Millar said. "That is their prerogative but I do think they could have made the change several other times when it would have been better—like the night when we lost 6-0 in San Francisco and the Leafs got five goals in the first period, or when we played three games in three nights or the night I played here against Portland when I was sick."

'Prize Sheep Without Shepherd'

"There's no reason," he continued, "why this club couldn't win this league easily. This is the best club in the minors except for Rochester but that story in The Hockey News had it just right—Victoria has the best club but Portland has the best leadership. We are just like a bunch of prize sheep without a shepherd. There is no such thing on our club as constructive criticism. There's just some guys who get the knife out."

Club Shouldn't Play Him

"I think we had to make a move the other night. Perhaps we should have made it sooner to give the young fellow (Holland) a chance to play a few games but I knew we had to make the shift last Friday. We weren't going well and we are trying to win this thing. And I still think we can."

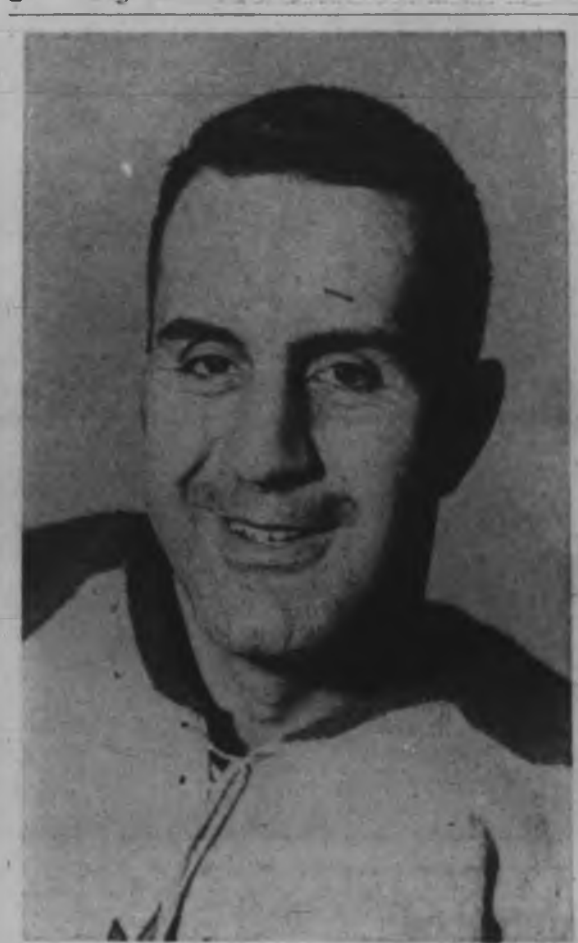

Elder-statement Andy Heberton, who commands the respect of all his teammates, was asked about the situation.

"The way I see it," he said, "is that if a player doesn't want to play for a club then the club shouldn't play him."

And that may be where the matter stands now. The probability exists that a change will be made within the Toronto farm system but there may be no announcement until Rochester Americans show up here for an interlocking game Saturday night.

More Administration Money

Less Student Control In University Athletics

By ROBIN JEFFREY

More administration money and less student control are the two chief features of tentative proposals to reorganize the athletic program at the University of Victoria.

Until this year, students have had virtually complete control of all facets of athletics—including purchasing equipment, drawing up schedules, preparing team budgets, and appointing coaches. In September, however, Bob Bell, a member of the faculty, took up his duties as athletic co-ordinator.

This year Bell has taught physical education and—in theory—"co-ordinated" the athletic program. But since athletics had previously been administered almost entirely by students, Bell's duties and his rights were indistinct.

THREE STUDENTS
A committee of three students—athletic council president Bruce Wallace, Alma Mater Society president Paul Williamson and Rick Kurtz—drew up a new plan for athletic organization. Then they consulted faculty representatives—registrars R. R. Jeffels and A. E. Loft.

Changes were made and Saturday the new plan will be discussed at a meeting with university president Dr. Malcolm Taylor.

TO SENATE
This meeting could lead to final agreement on what form the new organization is to take. And from there, it would be a matter of submitting it to the university senate and the student council for approval.

The proposals would have an athletic directorate of three students and three senate appointees, with Bell, as athletic "director," sitting in as secretary. The directorate would decide questions of policy and approve the annual budget which would then be turned over to Bell to administer.

GRANT, TOO
But the budget would consist of an administration grant in addition to the customary allowance from the student AMS fee which has provided athletics with most of its money in the past.

"This proposal will bring in administration money," Bell says, "and more money is required for athletic expansion."

Each representative team would send members to an extramural council on which Bell would be a voting member. And men's and women's intramural councils, under student

Blades 10 Portland 0

LOS ANGELES—Hal Laycoe probably still doesn't believe it, but his Portland Buckaroos were beaten, 10-0, here Tuesday night by, of all people, Los Angeles Blades.

Getting hat tricks from Leo LaBine and Buddy Boone, the Blades gave the league-leading Buckaroos their worst beating of this season—and probably against Seattle, made 28 stops including 15 in the second period. Dave Kelly faced 40 shots in the Portland net.

In winning, the Blades moved out of the cellar, past San Francisco Seals into fifth place. Buckaroos used up one of their games in hand over Victoria Maple Leafs, who are five points back in second place.

FIRST PERIOD

Vancouver NHL Bid Not Right

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank J. Selke, vice-chairman of Montreal Canadiens, said Tuesday he believes Vancouver's bid for a National Hockey League franchise was passed over because a poor presentation did not reflect complete community support.

The Montreal hockey executive, long a prominent voice in NHL affairs, made the remark during a visit to Mayor William Rattray's office. He said NHL governors got the impression that a small group of men suddenly wanted to join the league.

He was referring to the bid made by a group headed by Cyrus McLean, chairman of the board of the B.C. Telephone Co. "Now you have to regroup forces and see if all interested groups can be joined together with full community support," Mr. Selke told reporters.

"If you are going to give up after one rebuff the application wasn't worth while in the first place."

B.C. and Newfoundland Rinks Pull High School Curling Upsets

In the other fourth-round matches, Alberta, skipped by Brian Howes of Calgary, defeated George Wilson, the Manitoba champions from Charlwood, 10-4 and Prince Edward Island, under skip Keith MacEachern of Charlottetown, handed Leslie Hollands of Arvida, Que., an 8-5 loss.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — British Columbia and Newfoundland scored major upsets Tuesday night in the fourth round of the Canadian school curling championships.

Doug Engstrom's rink from Prince George handed Bill Ross of Humboldt, Sask., his first loss in four starts and dropped the Saskatchewan foursome from top spot.

Engstrom won 8-6 as did Daimy Herder of St. John's in his fourth-round clash against Mike Boyd of Kingston, the Ontario champion.

Northern Ontario's Wayne Steinhilber of North Bay moved to the top as he trounced Bev Groves of Edmonton, N.B., 15-4.

Bailey Joins Lions' Board

VANCOUVER (CP) — By Bailey, an original B.C. Lion and a member of the Western Football Conference team for 11 years, has been elected to a director's post with the club.

Bailey joined the Lions in 1954 as a fullback and later switched to linebacker and defensive halfback before retiring after the team's 1964 Grey Cup victory.

Club president Alan Eyre was re-elected to the board at the recommendation of the board of directors, although his term also had expired. He was returned for a second presidential term.

Cochairman Dave Skreim announced at the meeting that the Lions have signed Dave Moton, an end from the University of Southern California.

Avery Seniors Champ

NANAIMO (CP) — Frank Avery drew to the button with his last rock Tuesday to score a come-from-behind 8-7 victory over Mickey Brennan and win the British Columbia seniors curling championship here.

Down 5-7 after nine ends, the Vancouver skip took advantage of a Brennan miss to draw in the winning shot.

The Vancouver skip was supported by Ned Wignington, Les Kidson and Bill Person.

Earlier in the day they defeated Brennan 10-6 and will head for the national seniors finals at Winnipeg March 28-April 3.

Ches Edwards, Al Woods and George Dyson were the other members of Brennan's rink.

Voters 'Blackmailed' Thunders Gibson

By BARRY JOHNSON

North Vancouver MLA Gordon Gibson said in the legislature Tuesday he would resign his seat if it would move Premier Bennett to go ahead with a new First Narrows crossing.

Terming the premier's "blackmailing" of North Shore voters "the most despicable thing" he had seen in politics, Mr. Gibson said:

"If I am the only one standing in the way of the bridge I will step aside if he will do the job he should do."

But he added later: "I'm getting old and mean and I just might be mean enough to run again."

STRONG ATTACK

Mr. Gibson was twice ordered by deputy speaker William Spears (S.C. Cariboo) to withdraw remarks as he voiced stronger and stronger invective against the premier and his Socred supporters.

Once in his angry speech he stated: "The real fear and danger in this country is in the mind and brain of the premier."

Ordered to withdraw, he added: "All right then—I'm very very fearful of this government—and the premier leads the government."

He was again ordered to withdraw when he referred to the actions of the premier in Friday's debate in which he said Mr. Bennett threatened Speaker William Murray in Mr. Murray's office that he would call a snap election.

Said Mr. Gibson: "Last Friday... I have never seen anyone as childish and arrogant as our premier that night. That man who lost control of himself is in no position to hold the position of honor and trust that he does."

He was ordered to withdraw because the statement was a personal reference to a member not seated.

Mr. Gibson withdrew and continued: "It was another of his or the government's lust for power when they can't have their own way."

"He acted like a little kid a baby when he couldn't shove around the members of this House."

Mr. Bennett allows Socreds members from the Victoria area to worry for hours about the whole world he said. He should be the last man to call "time."

For more than half an hour Mr. Gibson ranted the silent government for failing to move on the North Shore bridge.

"Mr. Bennett has the money," he said. "And the minister of highways has the plan."

When the premier bought the First Narrows bridge in 1953 he took on responsibility for providing transportation for the North Shore he said. He had promised a new bridge in every election since.

He accused the premier of threatening: "If you want the bridge get rid of Gibson."

"RANSOM"

"There is no misconception," Mr. Gibson said. "It's the premier that's holding up the bridge for ransom. It's planned and schemed."

"The premier is trying to make every person who uses that bridge head to his wall."

"It's about the most despicable thing I can think of."

Saying he had been watching the legislature for 15 years Mr. Gibson charged: "Only the premier is standing in the way... or political ambition and political greed. In fact he does nothing unless it benefits himself or his political party."

The four Social Credit cabinet ministers from Vancouver are powerless to help because "the premier somehow has them shackled. They are negligent in fearful of the government Mr. Gibson continued: "Business must pay its shot. The municipalities, the cities, the universities have to bow."

"They know if they speak up they'll be cut from ear to ear."

"He thinks he's God—"

"There's a pollution—a political pollution—spreading through the land," he said. "It is planned by you, Mr. Premier, behind closed doors."

SLAVES

Even the cabinet and other government members were afraid to speak, he charged.

"They have become slaves. They've got what they wanted and they can't squeal any more."

"I know this is why you wanted your bank for more power and domination over the freedom of the people."

LANGUAGE

At this point, Recreation Minister Kiernan rose to demand the Speaker require Mr. Gibson to withdraw: "I don't believe that kind of language is permitted in this or any other legislature."

Mr. Gibson was not told to withdraw.

But he did say he had changed his mind about building a monument to Mr. Bennett atop the Peace River dam.

Red Crash Toll Now Totals 21

MOSCOW (AP) — Funeral services held Tuesday at the Moscow crematorium disclosed that the crash of a TU-144 airliner at the city's international airport last week claimed 21 lives.

Earlier estimates of the toll by Soviet and Western sources had run as high as 48.

Harvest Labor Shortage Critical in B.C.

British Columbia's agriculture industry is faced with an extreme shortage of harvest labor, the legislature's standing committee on agriculture was told Tuesday.

A B.C. Federation of Agriculture brief urged that a provincial manpower committee be set up immediately to analyse farm labor requirements and find some means of meeting them.

The situation is so serious that if it is not solved soon the industry may disappear, the committee was told by John Kroysty of Vernon, a member of the B.C. Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association.

The delegation pointed out

'Mental Ills Undetected'

Dowding Charges 'Criminal Neglect'

Gordon Dowding (NDP, Burnaby) accused the government Tuesday of "criminal neglect" in failing to set up means of early detection of mental illness.

"In B.C., early detection of mentally ill seldom occurs until the patient has become a community or school problem," he said, "and often not even then."

He charged that persons in Victoria and Vancouver had been turned away from hospitals later to be involved in "some horrible tragedy."

RECENT MURDERS

He referred to recent murders in both centres where the person involved had a history of mental illness but was unable to obtain care in overcrowded facilities.

"A sweet, innocent little child was murdered because a youth had no one to turn to," he said. "It is criminal neglect that this should happen," he said. "The Vancouver coroner has as much as said that, when he blamed 'inadequate facilities.'"

QUICK REPLY

Health Minister Eric Martin piped up: "Nobody is turned away. Nobody is turned away." Mr. Dowding suggested the $25,000,000 spent to relieve PGE debt would have been "a most useful addition" to the province's mental health program.

"The government's problem has been how to dispose of its abundant revenues without running into huge surpluses."

BOLSTER PROGRAM

He urged the government to bolster its program of travelling clinics, regional psychiatric centres and professional services in school districts.

"Detection at an early stage is now possible," he said. "But it is still unrealized in B.C., in consequence of which the community pays a heavy price in family tragedy, social offenders and wastage of human resources."

"Even where cases of acute mental breakdown are discovered, little is done because of lack of staff facilities and concerted action by government, doctors and our schools."

LIP SERVICE

He charged that the government paid only lip service to the principle of decentralized mental health services as recommended in the Hall commission report.

B.C. is also bringing up the rear in providing social workers, transitional group living homes and supportive facilities for rehabilitating former mental patients. He said this was particularly true in areas "out side the Lower Mainland."

Also in mental health research, "B.C. has lagged far behind the rest of North America," he said. The province "has received only meagre support from this government in mental health research."

He was ordered to withdraw because the statement was a

Asian Flu Socks Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—School absenteeism ran as high as 31 per cent Tuesday as an epidemic of flu in Greater Vancouver showed no signs of subsiding.

The suburbs of Richmond and Burnaby appeared to be the areas worst hit by the virus, with the 31 per cent absenteeism figure being recorded at a Richmond elementary school.

In Burnaby, absenteeism ranged from 10 per cent to 25 per cent.

Martin Discovers Minister's a 'He'

Health Minister Eric Martin apparently thought either that federal Health Minister Mac-

Enchen is a woman or that Judy LaMarsh still holds the Ottawa portfolio.

In a speech in the legislature Tuesday, Gordon Dowding (NDP, Burnaby) referred to the federal minister while criticizing the Socred mental health services policy.

Intending to stab a rebuttal across the floor, Mr. Martin aimed a forefinger and began: "She..."

"It's a he, Mr. Minister—a he," the opposition jibed as the House broke up with laughter.

Said Mr. Dowding: "I suggest the minister learn who the federal minister is, then learn his department's regulations, then initiate a publicly-owned ambulance service."

MLA Asserts

Clinics Lacking

Mentally ill children in B.C. are being classified as juvenile delinquents because of the government's failure to provide forensic clinics, Gordon Dowding (NDP, Burnaby) charged in the legislature Tuesday.

Forensic clinics are designed to help deviates and emotionally disturbed persons who come to the attention of the law.

Mr. Dowding told the House there were "many" children at Brammen Lake who were mentally ill, not juvenile delinquents.

Only one in 60 was being treated, he said, although 5 to 10 per cent of all school-age children are emotionally disturbed. "Although prediction tables can foretell potential social delinquency or emotional instability with 84 per cent accuracy at age five or six, this field of detection and prevention is almost non-existent," he said.

"Half the cases of juvenile delinquency could be headed off at the pass."

House Baffles U.S. Students

Five students from Western Washington State College, all enough to take care of the business of the state."

Dr. John J. Hobal, in charge of the students from his class in public personnel administration, said the students had a chance to see the Social Credit, New Democratic and Liberal politicians in action during the afternoon sitting.

"It takes the students a little time to appreciate the difference between political parties here, and more time to sort out how Social Credit parties differ in Alberta and B.C.," he said.

NOT THE SAME

Socreds in B.C. and Alberta are different, says Dr. Hobal. "Just as the Democratic Party is not the same, say, between Washington State and Mississippi."

British Columbia's parliamentary system of government "differs in very interesting ways from state systems in the United States," he said, conceding that B.C. had an advantage over Washington State by holding its legislative sessions every year.

"Our legislature holds a 60-day session every two years."

Magazine Photo Launched Star

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Rosemary Forsyth is a long-legged blonde from Montreal who achieved the dream of millions of star-struck girls.

Her photograph on a magazine cover caught the eye of a Hollywood casting director and she was summoned for a series of screen tests. Shortly afterwards, Universal Pictures gave the unknown model a seven-year contract, sent her for an extensive course in dramatic training and launched her into a full-blown star in Shenandoah, playing opposite James Stewart.

In her second movie, The War Lord, the blue-eyed, 22-year-old actress plays an 18th-century peasant girl who captivates veteran epic hero Charlton Heston, playing a feudal Norman ruler.

COMEDY FILM
Her next movie, Texas Across the River, will be a comedy western with Dean Martin and the French heartthrob Alain Delon, which she hopes will give her scope to blossom as a comedienne.

Movie men are predicting a great future for Rosemary and British newspaper men descended in hordes on her London hotel suite when she flew into this city recently after a continental tour promoting The War Lord.

UNAWED

Relaxing in a chintz chair after the last cameraman had taken the last cheese cake shot, Rosemary appeared totally unawed by her meteoric streak to success.

"Sometimes I think I'd really be happier staying home cooking and washing dishes," she said with a grin. "I'm very much a home person."

Acting ambitions? "I'd like to be as good an actress as I can."

Rosemary

Montreal but left at the age of three for New York. She still lives in Manhattan. In a 14th-floor East Side apartment with panoramic views of which she is intensely proud.

"If I hadn't gone into acting I would have become an interior decorator," she said. "If things go wrong with acting I may still become one."

BRUISED STARS

The girl whom American movie writers have described as combining the regal beauty of Grace Kelly with the naturalness and warmth of Ingrid Bergman has something of the cool detachment of Greta Garbo when it comes to the whirl of Hollywood bellydances. The anxious yearning to be accepted and embraced by the movie capital that has bruised so many stars — most tragically, Marilyn Monroe — could not be farther from Rosemary Forsyth's determination to lead a normal life.

AVOIDS VORTEX

"I think I've only been to four Hollywood parties in the past two years," she said. "It is possible to avoid being sucked into the vortex, and most of my friends there are unknown anyway, so we manage to make our own entertainment and have our own parties."

"I did once date a very famous Hollywood figure, but we were followed everywhere all the time by cameramen and columnists. That sort of thing is not for me. I don't act more like a film star, well, that's just too bad."

NO IMAGE

Lounging elegantly in a black sleeveless dress with no jewelry except an ornate gold ring, no makeup and her long blonde hair falling carelessly about her shoulders, Rosemary said she found no difficulty in being herself despite the pressures of stardom.

"I guess I'm just too lazy to try keeping up an image all the time."

Tax-Dodgers Are Named

LAGOS (Reuters) — Twenty-eight former ministers were named among 400 persons named as tax defaulters and ordered to pay their dues within 14 days in eastern Nigeria. Defaulters were warned their properties will be attached and sold by public auction if they fail to pay within the specified period.

Mark and James Fraser

Youthful Violinist Collects Double Honors

Talented Victoria violinist Mark Butler, 17, has the double distinction of being chosen for the National Youth Orchestra for the third time and also being accepted as a pupil at the Royal Academy of Music London.

Mark, son of Canon Hilary C. Butler and Mrs. Butler of 2684 Seaview Road, will travel to London to begin studies in September.

Prior to moving to Victoria in 1961, Mark was a piano pupil of his mother Mrs. Josephine Butler, a registered music teacher.

He later studied violin in Oliver and became concertmaster of the school orchestra. James Fraser has been responsible for the musical development of Mark Butler since 1961 and through his efforts Mark satisfied the audition panel for the National Youth Orchestra in 1964.

After completing a season with this distinguished group of young musicians, he was invited to play with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

In addition to this orchestral experience, he has also been a member of the first violin section of the Greater Victoria Schools Orchestra.

Scholarships seem to come naturally to Mark. He has been to the Banff School of Fine Arts twice on awards for string players. In 1962 he studied under Clayton Hare at Banff and in 1963 under Jack Montague.

Mark now hopes his talent as a violin player will enable him to obtain scholarships for his London studies.

Offshore Rights Asked by MP

They Almost Packed It Up

Jay and Americans Struggled to Top-Twice

By DAN LEWIS

Last in a Series

There was a time, not too long ago, when Jay and the Americans were about ready to chuck it all and return to such normal routines as a shoe salesman, student, apprentice mortician, and textile businessman.

That's where these five young men from Brooklyn were headed until they got together several years ago and formed a singing group now recognized as one of the more successful in the nation.

But the success that came easy was difficult to sustain. Jay and the Americans made it big the first time out—with a song called She Cried in the Spring of 1962. How the record zoomed! It sold more than 500,000, pushed way up to the top of the charts, and brought an immediate avalanche of bookings all over the country.

NOT READY
Alas, the boys weren't prepared for personal appearances. They confess that the act bombed out on tour. It almost killed off Jay and the Americans for good.

They put out two more records and, at best, generated only limited excitement—again by their own admission.

ONE BY ONE
Taking them one by one, they would have meant:

Jay Black, leader of the group (born Nov. 2, 1941), would have returned to the shoe store as a salesman.

Kenny Vance (born Dec. 9, 1943), lover of antiques, and heavy reader, back to his father's textile business.

Sandy Deane (born Jan. 30, 1943), father a salesman, business administration graduate New York University, who considered joining his father as a salesman.

Howie Kane (born June 6, 1943), a licensed mortician—whose father owns three funeral homes. "Nuff said."

GOOD ACT
Fate intervened at this juncture and their future was decided by circumstances that led the five talented young men to a new manager and a new booking office.

"This time, we really put ourselves together," Jay recalls. "We made sure we had a good act, so that our success didn't depend exclusively on records."

By the spring of 1963, Jay and the Americans were ready for that second try at success. Soon opportunity knocked a second time, a new hit record. Only in America. New bookings followed on the strength of it. This time they were ready for the personal appearances. And they made good.

ARKED BACK

"Even when the record stopped selling, we were asked back," Jay reported.

They followed with Let's Lock the Door which Sandy wrote. Where they had a soft sound before, this was their first hard rock 'n' roll record. It was a profitable interlude because it

SHOWED TALENT

Their big hit of 1965, Carla, went as high as No. 2 on some of the charts, with the sales of nearly 700,000, and stayed in the Top 10 for 11 weeks. The boys also showed how talented they are by appearing in the summer stock version of Mya Mya Birdie in Chicago. They were all written into the play with special parts.

Also, Jay and his boys made a cameo appearance in their first movie, Snow Ball, singing pop tunes. In a wide sweep to capture audiences of all ages, they also appeared on the Tonight show.

Since the boys are in their 20's, they're looking to the future with a staying-power act that incorporates some comedy as well as a hint of an adult touch to their performances.

Today, they're making numerous appearances on college campuses as well as nightclubs and just about every network variety TV show. They sing folk songs, show tunes, pop rock 'n' roll and even mix in a little bit of jazz so that they touch all bases.

LIKE BRITONS

They have great affection too, for the British groups and what they have done for the business. Marty comments:

George Dufour's Galswells was sixth.

The other boys scored in the following order: Don Lawman in Sloop Te-Pah; D. J. Evans in 24-400; Herreshoff, II; A. A. Stuart Law in Sloop Trio; John Weir in Thunderbird; Aurelia and Louis Lindholm in Onna.

100,000 records the very first week it was out. Last year, their big hit was Come a Little Bit Closer, which landed in the Top 20 and stayed there for more than a dozen weeks. Still selling strong around the country, nearly 500,000 copies of the record have crossed counters into the eager hands of fans.

SHOWN TALENT

Their big hit of 1965, Carla, went as high as No. 2 on some of the charts, with the sales of nearly 700,000, and stayed in the Top 10 for 11 weeks. The boys also showed how talented they are by appearing in the summer stock version of Mya Mya Birdie in Chicago. They were all written into the play with special parts.

Also, Jay and his boys made a cameo appearance in their first movie, Snow Ball, singing pop tunes. In a wide sweep to capture audiences of all ages, they also appeared on the Tonight show.

Since the boys are in their 20's, they're looking to the future with a staying-power act that incorporates some comedy as well as a hint of an adult touch to their performances.

Today, they're making numerous appearances on college campuses as well as nightclubs and just about every network variety TV show. They sing folk songs, show tunes, pop rock 'n' roll and even mix in a little bit of jazz so that they touch all bases.

"A lot of them are amateurish, but they almost all have a lot of life. They play and sing with feeling. What they've done is they gave back recordings to the performers and have taken it away from the record producers with their electronic gimmicks."

All the boys had some prior experience, either as singers or with other groups, before they renewed neighborhood acquaintances and formed their own group.

LONG WAY

Jay is the lead singer with a voice that belies his heavy Brooklyn accent.

Howie is a show-business type, dry sense of humor, who likes to write music as well as sing.

Kan is a slow talker who sort of ambles along. He's 6 feet 3 inches tall and is called "The Quiet One" by his mates.

Sandy fancies himself as an impresario and spends much time grooming new talent.

Ganges Races Hard-Won

Pancakes Airborne

By DORIS CROFTON
GANGES — More than 50 contestants from pre-school children to grandmothers raced with aprons flapping and pancakes flipping Shrove Tuesday.

Crowds lined both sides of the causeway at Ganges. It was cordoned off for the ninth annual running of the Pancake Derby.

There were 13 races. Winner in the grandmother's race was Mrs. Ellen Bennett.

Other fleet grandmothers were Mrs. Madeleine Barber and Mrs. Edith Barber.

The men's open was won by Les Ramsey, with Kenneth Ralph and Rod Pringle close behind.

Mrs. J. C. Jeffery won the women's open, with Joyce Vieschneyer and Tracy Jackson placing second and third.

In a special race, school principal Jack Evans came first and won a frying pan from Salt Spring Island Chamber.

Close behind were Susan Harkus from the Bank of Montreal and Beth Wood, former mayor of New Westminster, who is now an official of Salt Spring's Chamber.

More than 100 pancake lunches were polished off at the Legion Hall.

Duncan Council

Schools Budget Bounced

DUNCAN—This city has refused to accept the 1966 Cowichan school district budget.

Council sent the budget back to the school board for a "downward revision."

The $2,567,000 budget — up $440,000 from last year — was rejected Tuesday at a meeting of Mayor Jack Dobson, Ald. Jim Saunders and Ald. Hamish Mutter.

"TOO LOOSE"

Ald. Mutter said "the whole thing is too loose to me; in other words, we are a rubber stamp."

He suggested several items on the budget could be reduced.

Mayor Dobson and Ald. Saunders admitted they had not studied the budget enough, but the mayor said "I question if we can afford such an expensive high standard?"

The joint meeting was held Feb. 15 between Cowichan School Board and representatives from the city and North Cowichan.

North Cowichan Wednesday approved the budget with a slight majority.

Recipe for Conviction

Sunday Closing Case Brings Store $40 Fine

NANAIMO — When a grocery store clerk checked through an order for an RCMP sergeant Nov. 21, she said "that's a weird mixture."

It was indeed. Sgt. Bob Guy had bought an ironing board cover, apple juice, peanuts and a mouth organ.

They were all required ingredients in a recipe to convict Vic's Foodliner Ltd. under the Sunday closing laws.

Tuesday Magistrate Eric Winch looked over the pile of goods that made up Sgt. Guy's strange shopping list and imposed a $40 fine on the store.

Sgt. Guy said there were 35 people present, not counting the staff, when he picked out his potpourri.

The reason for the unusual nature of the items was a section in the law that says some necessary goods can be purchased on Sunday.

Defence lawyer T. G. McLellan, Shawnigan Lake, said all the goods purchased could be considered essential from time to time.

The Daily Colonist was cited by the defence as an example of an item purchased on Sunday.

He said the newspaper "is allowed to publish Sunday morning and sell papers all day."

"We would have to look into the archives to check this case," said Mr. McLellan.

Magistrate Winch said "there have been very few prosecutions of this nature in B.C."

"Customs and habits are changing and the laws may become old, the word archaic may be fitted to them but the courts take the laws as they find them.

"Convenience is not necessity, I appreciate it is convenient to have a store like Vic's Foodliner."

"But on Mr. Dixon's own testimony, this store is open every day, and because of this people can plan ahead," Mr. Winch said.

Mr. McLellan said he would appeal the decision.

Already 3,000 people have signed a petition in the store requesting legislation to allow Sunday opening.

Vic's Foodliner is outside city limits at Wellington, three miles north of Nanaimo. The supermarket is open from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. seven days a week.

Recreation Proposal Draws Duncan Sparks

Charge Sparks Spat

'Lax Officials' Tag Stings Courtenay Mayor

COURTENAY — A charge by an alderman that city officials don't know their own regulations brought an angry retort from Mayor George Hobson this week.

"I think some of our officers have been lax in their duties," said Ald. Harry Harris.

"I'm not going to let you get away with that," retorted Mayor Hobson.

Ald. Harris moved a building permit be issued to G. W. Dawson for an addition to his store near the marina.

Mr. Dawson's request had been turned down in the past both by council and the zoning appeal board. But recently when the matter went to the advisory planning commission it was discovered the building was not a non-conforming use as council had believed.

"I feel we have slipped up somewhere at the council table. We were under the impression the request was for a non-conforming use."

FINALLY GRANTED
Ald. Harris said they were fortunate to be dealing with such an easy-going man as Mr. Dawson, and said Mr. Dawson had been held up long enough.

"This is a case where some one in our organization should know the bylaws. I think some of our officers have been lax in their duties."

"Let's all of us smarten up and do some homework, and the same applies to the staff."

"I am not going to let you get away with that," was the sharp retort made by the mayor. He claimed many council members put in a lot of work. "I do myself," he said, "I don't feel any alderman should make such a statement."

Mr. Dawson's request was finally granted.

Council gave approval to the school district budget in the amount of $2,385,607. The budget is up $374,681 from last year.

MONEY NEEDED

The plan would require money from Duncan to be used for part of the cost of a recreation centre in the southern portion of North Cowichan.

"How can we support something we don't know anything about?" asked Mayor Dobson.

North Cowichan would contribute $300,000 and the city also would be required to pay a share.

COMMISSION IN FAVOR

Other money from the North Cowichan referendum would be used for an arena at Fuller's Lake and as a share in a proposed swimming pool.

City council was advised by its recreation commission it would be in favour of the North Cowichan plan providing the second sports centre would be at Duncan and a time limit be set for commencement of development.

Ald. Saunders said, "It seems to me they try to bring the two of us (Duncan and North Cowichan) together." Ald. Hamish Mutter complained of lack of co-ordination in planning in the past.

Mayors Told

Pollution Facts Needed

PORT ALBERNI—You can outlaw pollution, but you have to know something about it to make the law stick. This was the message mayors of the Twin Cities received in Victoria recently.

"Even if the government were to pass an air-pollution act tomorrow, they would not have the technical knowledge to enforce it," the mayors were told.

Mayor Fred Bishop of Alberni and Mayor Les Hammer of Port Alberni issued a statement after their talks with Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell and Lands and Forests Minister Williston.

"Numerous conferences on the subject have been held between all the provincial resource ministers in Canada."

"All have agreed that it is a highly complex problem. Pollution can be reduced, but in spite of what some may honestly believe, the technical means are still not known for total elimination of all pulp mill pollutants as they have been in some other industries."

Another conference of resource ministers will be held in the near future.

Courtenay Goose Case Sequel

Outsiders Hit 'Gestapo' Bylaw

COURTENAY — If city council thought Courtenay was gaining notoriety from the goose case, they've seen the real thing now.

"Gestapo, petty, rotten," were among the words applied to a city bylaw to empower the poundkeeper to enter a property for the purpose of seizing or impounding animals.

F. W. Lindsay, Lytton, said he thought of moving to Courtenay but the issue has changed his mind.

"This new bylaw will allow pin-headed... types to seize any animal."

During the original goose case, council complained about "notoriety" on CBC television.

At this week's council meeting a letter from Vancouver resident, Mrs. M. Morgan, said the new bylaw is "sniping, rotten, petty tactics."

Council was told by Mr.

Livesley, all that appeared necessary for them to act under the bylaw was a complaint. In many cases the unsupported word of one person.

He said the accused has absolutely no way to defend himself or his animals.

"This is a strange way to dispense democratic justice," he said.

"We have had our geese for 2½ years without a complaint and when neighbors complained, it coincided with what they considered to be an unfair division of property."

The speaker told the council meeting he was bringing the subject up to show them the law in its present form could be used for an ulterior motive.

Council then rescinded the new ruling.

The mayor said the whole subject was under the consideration of the courts and no action could be taken by council at this time.

"There is no one sitting on council with two heads."

The mayor added "We are very sorry that we have landed in this situation."

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

When the New Year's Honors list was made public one British newspaper stated that British Empire Medal winner, Miss Winnifred Farmer was just one, ordinary-seeming name on the list.

But went on "Yet she is one of the most remarkable women in the country."

And when Miss Farmer wrote to Mrs. S. D. Jenkins, Goldstream Road, this is what she had to say:

"Now for the exciting news. The Queen has awarded me the Order of The British Empire Medal. I have had a letter from the Prime Minister and my name has been on the radio and in the daily paper. I am so thrilled but don't know why I am the lucky one."

I will have to go to Buckingham Palace for The Queen to pin on the medal. Can you imagine it?"

Winnifred Farmer who lives in a little whitewashed cottage in Kent, came to Victoria two years ago to visit her brother-in-law and sister, the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Harding on Leigh Road. And she made many friends here, among them Mrs. Jenkins.

After reading her story you'll understand only too readily why Miss Farmer was so honored.

Quoting excerpts from a British newspaper in an article written by Rhona Churchill, here it is:

"I'm a nobody. I can't think why I have been given a medal."

"The love of those children is enough reward."

This said Miss Farmer on receiving the medal for spending 21 years successfully foster-mothering four abandoned and handicapped problem children.

Miss Farmer is a warm hearted woman of 67 whose story really begins with the 1914-18 war. It killed her childhood sweetheart and deprived her of children of her own.

The next war gave her a chance to be mother to eight evacuees. She was 41 and a spinster, yet soon she became the woman to whom the billeting officer brought the problem children nobody else would take.

She was desolate when her evacuees left after the war. Then the children's officer brought her Doreen, Doreen was five and had a glass eye. Her father had disappeared. Her father put her in an orphanage.

The trouble was nobody fancied the job of washing Doreen's glass eye, said Miss Farmer. 'She was neglected and retarded and needed the kind of love and care you don't get in an orphanage. I took her in and together we coped.'

Next came Peter, brought by the probation officer. He was seven. His mother had reported him out of control and said that he stole.

His mother had left him all day and most of the night in a basement room. He was half starved and had never been to school.

He had been picked up wandering in the streets at night, said Miss Farmer, and had been put in a remand home. He was terrified of the police, and the remand home was doing him more harm than good.

He needed love. Miss Farmer provided it.

Then came Rosemary. She was the abandoned baby of an immature mother. She had epilepsy and became an retarded and difficult that she was classified mentally handicapped and placed in an institution.

"She should never have gone there," said Miss Farmer. All she needed was mother love. And finally they gave her a little girl of 2½—Christine. Christine, a waif, had been sent to three different homes on approval for adoption. Each time she had been handed back after the trial period.

Miss Farmer took her in until another adoptive couple could be found. But when they were Christine cried and cried and would not talk until they took her back to Miss Farmer's cottage, which has been her home ever since.

It was not the kind of a family most women would choose. It was full of problems.

Lots of tantrums, misdeeds and bed-wetting. Never enough money for the little extras the children's school friends took for granted. Difficulties with home work and failure to pass exams.

Miss Farmer took them hopping in the summer and used the money to buy them school uniforms, books and bicycles.

Throughout all those years she also went out cleaning in the big house next door, five days a week, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., for £2 (80) so that her children could have jam and cakes, toys and treats.

"I felt that loving them was the main thing I could do for them," she said. "So I never told the welfare officer when they were naughty. And I never punished them for things that weren't their fault."

And in time the tantrums, misdeeds and bed-wetting stopped and the children became a close-knit family group, fond and proud of each other.

Peter, who might have become a criminal had he stayed in the remand home, grew into a fine young man, found a job in local government and married.

Rosemary, who might have spent all her days in mental institutions, became an auxiliary nurse and married a policeman.

Doreen, the first to marry, has given Miss Farmer three smashing grandchildren. She emigrated to Australia last summer.

By this time, Miss Farmer has been to the Palace to have her medal pinned on by the Queen.

The family must be so very proud of their mother.

Cruising in Caribbean

The Pat Simmonds are just back from a wonderful holiday in the Caribbean and they had good news when they returned. They were in Calgary to tell her they were home. Patsy and husband, Major W. S. Wilson and their three daughters are motoring out to Victoria for the Easter holiday.

The Simmonds flew out to Trinidad early in January and then went to Tobago where they had two weeks of sunshine and just rested on the beach. They fell in love with Tobago.

It was quite exciting when the Beasles arrived at the hotel escorted by the Premier of Trinidad, says Ruth Simmonds. Yes, she did get their autographs.

"Our bungalow at this hotel was right next to the one The Queen was to occupy when she visited there."

Another close brush with Royalty came when the Simmonds were on a two-week cruise of the islands and berthed alongside the Royal yacht in the Barbadoes. The cruise ship sailed in the morning and The Queen and Prince Philip were scheduled to board their yacht at 5 that afternoon.

The cruise ended in Jamaica where they met Victorians, Mr. and Mrs. J. Villers Fisher and former Victorians Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Dalton. Kay Dalton was very well known in theatrical circles here. The Daltons now live on Fifth Avenue in New York, right across from Central Park.

Their daughter, Sara has hit the big time in modelling. She models for both Vogue and Harper's Bazaar.

The Daltons' niece, Jeanne Pettit, (formerly Salomon) who also used to live here, has been discovered by the movies. She is playing the lead part as Kay in the movie The Group, to be released in March.

The Simmonds were most interested that their cruise ship, the Federal Palm, had been a gift from Canada to the West Indies.

Beaux Arts Reunion

There is a strong movement afoot to organize an informal reunion of the Beaux Arts Club that flourished here in the 30s.

F. J. Child says that at a social gathering the other evening "a number of us were reminiscing about the good times we all had in this group. We were surprised to find how many names of ex-members we could recall and it was suggested that it might be interesting to organize an informal reunion to renew old friendships. A no-host cocktail and buffet supper was thought to be suitable.

"Any other former members who are interested and would like to attend such a gathering are asked to phone or contact Helen MacKenzie, EV 3-0550, Cynthia Child, 471-2852 or Sam Williams, EV 4-6411."

The wedding will take place at 7:30 p.m. this Saturday in St. Michael's and All Angels Church with Rev. W. E. Greenhalgh officiating.—(Campbell Studio)

Honored on 90th Birthday

More than 100 guests attended a reception in the hall of Centennial United Church, Saturday afternoon, arranged to mark the 90th birthday of Mrs. Albert Allison. The party was arranged by her five children, Mrs. J. (Mary) Louder of Ladue, B.C.; Mrs. Lou (Clara) Karadimas, Deep Cove; Hugh Allison, Edmonton; Carl Allison, Victoria, and Morris Allison, Vancouver.

The honor guest was born in Bloomington, N.B., on February 20, 1876. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Newton McLeod.

With her parents, she moved to Moose Jaw, Sask. at the age of eight, attending the first school in that city and Normal School at Regina. Before she married in 1904, the honor guest taught school in several Saskatchewan communities.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison moved to Victoria in 1908. Mrs. Allison has been an active church worker for most of her life. She joined the Wilkeson Road United in 1911, transferring to Centennial United Church in 1960.

Mrs. Allison still retains her interest in church work, being a member of the Centennial United Church Women's work group and helping to make the many blankets and quilts which the organization sends to overseas missionaries.

Saturday's party came as a great surprise to this alert woman, her family having managed to keep it a secret up to the last moment. Many of her 14 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren were there to help her make it the best birthday party of her life.

New members initiated were Mrs. M. C. Rodda, Mrs. F. Anderson and Mrs. S. J. Kuptitz.

A tea will be held Feb. 24 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the auditorium, 1616 Blanshard Street. There will be a home cooking stall at the affair.

VANCOUVER (UPI) — She's beautiful... she's intelligent... she's part of the Canadian "dame drain."

You didn't know about our "dame drain"?

In today's sophisticated world of wars on poverty and space races, it's not difficult to understand why. But it's there, big as life.

As a committee of one, let me tell you some findings. During the past 10 years, Canada has lost hundreds of beautiful girls to foreign countries—dancers, singers, nurses, teachers and stewardesses.

The biggest enemy in this field is that friendly neighbor to the south. The fact was discovered quite by accident during a flight from Vancouver to San Francisco.

Our outgoing stewardesses had the eyes of Sophia Loren, the figure of Gina Lollobrigida and the pout of Brigitte Bardot. A casual in-flight conversation disclosed she was from Kelowna.

On the return trip, another stewardess' beauty made the dull journey bright. I inquired about her, and found she too hailed from a small Canadian town.

At home I decided to probe the drain; I called the airline.

The personnel manager of United Airlines in Seattle was a congenial fellow. He disclosed one startling fact of the drain:

"Some 125 of the most beautiful girls in British Columbia are stewardesses with United Airlines in the U.S.," he said.

And if it were not for certain restrictions, I learned, every beautiful girl in B.C. could be working for United Airlines.

Norman Strange, the airlines employment manager, said he interviews dozens of Canadian girls in Vancouver every month.

"As many as 105 applicants show up at one sitting," confessed Strange, "and we never have less than 20." A small percentage are selected, he noted.

The girls work an average of 20 hours a week. They're guaranteed a minimum $335 for working 70 hours during the month. Their hourly wage is $7.50 on jets and $5.50 on propeller-driven craft.

"They must be 5'7" and under 5'8". They must tip the scales in proportion to their height. Other requisites include beauty, intelligence, maturity and good figure."

Fortunately, this screening program is stringent enough to keep many of the girls at home. But once they leave the land of the maple leaf, they begin flying to some of the world's most exciting cities, staying at the best hotels, eating the finest meals.

"It's a wonderful interim in a girl's life before she marries and settles down," noted Strange.

Unfortunately, not all return to Canada to do just that.

Many Attend BPW Banquet

Dr. Neil Perry, provincial deputy minister of education, dealt with "education in this changing world" when he addressed the Business and Professional Women's Club at the International Night Banquet in the Empress Hotel.

The guest speaker stressed the urgency of sending qualified people to newly emerging countries in order to help them set up education systems that will develop their human and natural resources. Dr. Perry further emphasized the need of expanding facilities in both academic and vocational fields.

Seated at the head table with Dr. and Mrs. Perry were Vogel Hunter, MLA for the Delta riding; Mrs. Lols Haggan, MLA for Grandfather-Crenewood; Mayor and Mrs. A. W. Toomey; Miss Elizabeth Clement, president of the local club; Miss Margaret Clay, Miss Hilda Hesson, Mrs. F. Laughlin, Mrs. J. Waterman, Mrs. R. Hamill, Mrs. Alice Hopkins, state president of the Oregon BPW club; Mrs. Winnifred Young, representing state president of the Washington BPW club; Mrs. Margaret Campbell, North Vancouver; Mrs. Roland Webster, Mrs. B. Makinson and Miss Ella Brett.

Following Dr. Perry's talk, Miss Eleanor Duff sang several songs, accompanied by Miss Marion Matcham. Later, Mrs. J. Waterman and Mrs. A. Russell conducted the International Candlelight Ceremony. Coffee was then served in the Georgian Lounge.

In charge of the evening's activities was Mrs. Miskman. Assisting her were Mrs. A. MacMaster, Mrs. E. Evans, Mrs. K. Fleming, Mrs. E. Forsythe and Miss Brett.

The many out-of-town and local members were again entertained by the Victoria club on Sunday, this time in the form of a coffee party at the War Amputations Hall. The affair was convened by Mrs. F. McClement. She was assisted by Mrs. E. McKinty, Miss Nona Rich, Miss Helen Cruikshank and Miss Winnifred Ellis.

Several came from the mainland city of Vancouver. They included Miss Jean Waddley, Mrs. E. Grimmett, Mrs. F. Jordan, Miss M. Peden, Mrs. W. Eckhart, Mrs. T. Chandler, Mrs. Jean Craig, Mrs. J. Carnegie, Mrs. M. Goble, Mrs. K. Mott, Mrs. M. George, Mrs. M. Ramsay, Mrs. B. Faulkner and Mrs. J. McCrossen.

Fort Langley visitors were Mrs. A. Hurley, Mrs. W. Nairne, Mrs. N. McCann, Mrs. P. Crook and Miss Pat Gray. From Duncan were Mrs. E. Miller, Mrs. D. Simpson, Mrs. A. Malsey, Miss J. Hall, Miss V. Harris, Mrs. M. Smythe, Mrs. H. Robertson, Mrs. C. Rutkin and Mrs. M. Kingston.

Sidney BPW members attending included Mrs. C. Milne, Mrs. M. Smith, Miss J. Newton and Miss May Caldwell.

LIFT HER FACE OUT OF WINTER LINES, WRINKLES and Aging DRYNESS

... thanks to the "Wiesbaden Discovery" CEF-600

Helps Every Complexion Regain and Retain The Younger Look by Immediately Counteracting Effects of Winter's Icy Grip

No matter if your skin is typed dry, normal or even oily... no matter whether you enjoy being outdoors or prefer indoor protection... both frigid arctic air and overheated dry room dehydrate, drain skin of water and deprive it of the necessary moisture that pushes skin up and out to keep it so smooth, firm and wrinkle-free as the day you were married. And now, during the social season, when you particularly want to look your youngest best, "old man winter" works overtime to dry out and make your skin on face and neck flabby, sagging, rough, chapped and weatherbeaten. You look and feel years older than your age. And your husband... it makes him feel older too!

Your Chance for a Quicker Winter Youth

Medical journals have acclaimed the "Wiesbaden Discovery" known scientifically as CEF-600 and now embodied as the active ingredient in the cosmetic-like lotion named "2ND DEBUT." Apply "2ND DEBUT" slightly before retiring and daily before make-up. Day and night, it is constantly carrying water into the skin... counteracting all the skin drying effects of outside cold and inside overheating that chaps, dries, wrinkles your skin and makes it sag.

How 2ND DEBUT Works Quickly

Once again skin is moisturized, fresh, dewy radiant. Once again those aging lines and wrinkles are pushed up and out. Once again skin on face and throat is smoother and years younger in appearance. No matter how weathered your complexion may be, a youth-like color glews from within. Your complexion seems to have been born beautiful. Only 2ND DEBUT can bring about this fantastic skin youthifying miracle... in spite of winter's drying action!

'If You Want to Help, Send Good Teachers'

The Jacks

By HELEN MUIR
GOLD RIVER—If an Indian is to make his mark in the white man's society, does he have to abandon his traditions?
Must he gain a college degree, escape the friends of his childhood, transplant his family in a more white, sophisticated atmosphere?
That's probably the success story that would spring to mind. But here is another success story.
Jerry Jack is a Nootka Indian.
He has only modest education. He works as a logger.
He has been able to combine two worlds, a job in the recent tradition of his people, a house with the finest conveniences of white society.

Mr. Jack, 28, lives with his wife and three small children in the new town of Gold River.
He was born at Friendly Cove, son of Ben Jack, hereditary sub-chief of the Nootka Band.
Mr. Jack is a boom man with Tahiti Logging at the Gold River beach camp on Muchalat Inlet.
His house in the townsite stands near the spot where his ancestors lived hundreds of years ago.
The Mowah-eh or Muchalat people, Indians of the Deer, roamed along the Gold River hunting in the valleys and setting their fish-traps in the river.
Their winter camp was believed to be close to the present townsite.
Nothing remains of the old settlement, but the remains of the summer camp at the mouth of the Gold River is still there, cheek-by-jowl with the new pulp mill now under construction.
A few Nootka people live there, and the small area is still known by the old name Ah-aminkia, place at the mouth of the river.
This is part of Jerry Jack's background, but unlike his ancestors, who lived in box-like huts of cedar slabs, warmed by wood fires he lives in a $21,000 split-level four-bedroom house with cedar shake roof and all electric heat.
On the subject of today's Indians and their problems, Mr. Jack has a few strong things to say.
"It's terrible, the kind of teaching we get in isolated places like Nootka and Kyuquot."
"They have been fortunate in Nootka, though, to have good teachers for the last five years. But they will be leaving, and then it will go back to the same old routine when they're gone."
"When I went to day school at home, we had a German teacher. She might have been a good teacher in Germany, but she was no use to us as she could barely speak English."
"I used to say we should get paid for teaching the teacher to speak English."
"I don't have to tell you what happens to most uneducated Indians who go to the cities."

"My brother was lucky to get public school in Gold River with a knowledge of both the Indian and English languages, and a full history of their own people. His education came the hard way, with many interruptions. He went to Christie Indian Residential School at Tofino for five years, and after a series of starts and stops at Friendly Cove day school, went on to get Grade 11 at St. Mary's Roman Catholic School in Mission.

"All I can say is, if the people on the outside world want to help the Indians, send us good teachers."
His round-about road to the townsite started five years ago, and was based on three things — he got a new job, he wanted to get married, and he wanted a home of his own.
When he couldn't get a house in Friendly Cove, or financial backing to build one there, he moved his new bride Mary into the only available place he could find — a tiny shack on the old Ah-aminkia place at the beach camp where his job was.
Two shacks and three years later, he bought a small trailer. As the family increased, he was about to trade the trailer in on a bigger one, when the new town of Gold River came into being.

Gold River is an open town, or will be when it is fully developed. At present, it houses mostly logging personnel of the company and related services. Anyone is welcome who is considered a good financial risk and able to assume his own responsibilities.
This was the equal opportunity that Mr. Jack needed. He qualified, and with a loan for economic improvement from the Indian Affairs branch, he moved into the townsite last October.
His children will go to the circumstances at home prevented him from finishing his schooling. Mary, his pretty wife, also attended Christie, but had to leave school at Grade 8 because of illness.

She is from Nuchatlitz, a small village on Nootka Island's northwest tip, and is one of twelve children.
When I visited the Jacks in their pleasant home, I heard in the background, tape-recordings of stories and songs in the Nootka tongue.
Mr. Jack recorded these himself from tales told by Mary's 80-year-old great-grandmother. With no written language, all the history of great battles and prowess in the hunt were handed down from generation to generation by the storytellers and the tribal singers and dancers.

Other tapes are Chiefs' songs, chronicles of bravery and feats of strength, chanted with drum accompaniment. There are so many of these songs, that Mr. Jack laughingly says there may have been more Chiefs than Indians in the old days. He hopes one day to translate these stories into English, on other tapes.

Mr. Jack is opposed to continual hand-outs to the Indians, which take away the initiative to do things for themselves and keeps them from learning the value of things.

Too many Indians, he believes, go on welfare in the winter. He thinks West Coast Indians have a better chance than most for year-round employment, in the fishing and logging industries.

He has worked steadily for nearly nine years at logging. The integration of the Jacks family into the white community has been gradual.

They have previously known many of their neighbors at the old beach camp, and this has made it easier for them to feel part of the new town.

Pollution Group Fights On

PORT ALBERNI—Suggestions that the citizens' committee on pollution is unsure where to go following failure of the legislature to appoint a committee on air pollution, was refuted Tuesday by Colin Wilson, on behalf of the 30 members who make up the committee.
Said Mr. Wilson: "It appears it is the British Columbia legislature that is unsure what to do next, and not the citizens' committee on pollution, as some press statements are attempting to show."
HEALTH DANGER
"The committee is going on as planned with preparation of a comprehensive brief that will be supplemented by exhibits of factual evidence of danger to homes and property, and in addition, with the assistance of the medical profession, will present evidence of damage to health arising from pollution in this area."
"The committee is opposed to any suggestion that pollution control legislation must await development of all the technical details required. The petition sets out the way in which we believe this should be done."

Nanaimo Committee Investigates Levy

NANAIMO—Centennial committee here will investigate possible levy of five cents per capita on residents in the unorganized area outside Nanaimo.
The money would go toward financing Empire Day celebrations this year.
Centennial Committee met with the Empire Day committee Tuesday.

Also at the meeting was Reg Gates, representing mid-Island boy scouts. The scouts plan to light five Centennial bonfires March 11.
The fires will be on Mount Benson, Snake Island, Departure Bay, and Wellington. There will be two on Benson.

School superintendent C. E. Ritchie and trustee Len Avenit questioned the value of such trips. But the board granted the trip request.
SPECIAL GROUP
Beaufort Association for Retarded Children informed the board a special committee has been set up to prepare a report to be placed before the board this fall. The group expect to ask the board to take over operation of the day school. The committee will have representation from local clubs and organizations, the Beaufort Association and the school board.

Hurn Promoted

Appointment of David E. Hurn as regional supervisor of the newly-formed Okanagan region of the provincial fish and game branch was announced Tuesday.
Mr. Hurn, who has been with the department of recreation and conservation for 14 years and was the regional fisheries biologist at Nanaimo, has gone to Penticton.
He will be responsible for the protection and management of the fish and wildlife resources of the Okanagan region, which includes Penticton, Grand Forks, Princeton, Kelowna and Vernon.

Board Okays Student Trip

COURTENAY—School board has approved a visit to Victoria by a group of senior high students, who will attend a program known as Democracy in Action. They will be guests of municipal affairs minister Dan Campbell.

School superintendent C. E. Ritchie and trustee Len Avenit questioned the value of such trips. But the board granted the trip request.

Traffic Victim Recovering

ALBERNI—Cliff Bouvette, 9, struck by a truck after leaving a school bus two weeks ago is now reported in very good condition.
Cliff was moved to a Victoria hospital for treatment and his mother accompanied him. On her return Mrs. Bouvette said the youngster is greatly improved, although he will remain in hospital for another couple of weeks.
"Then he'll go to his aunt, in Victoria for a weeks convalescence and spoiling," she said.

Cliff did not speak after the accident for several days and doctors feared a blood clot on his brain. Examination in Victoria showed none, and shortly after Cliff began to talk a little.
"Now he's talking a blue streak again," his mother reported happily, "and his aunt reports he's asking for all kinds of things."
Cliff is one of seven children of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Bouvette of Beaver Creek Road.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.
If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly blots disappear—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Bypass Route 'Good Plan'

By JOY HUNTLEY
CAMPBELL RIVER — "Make this an attractive town and people will stop. Otherwise they will put their foot on the gas and get out of here!"

That was the warning of Robert Collier, UBC extension department, speaking at a town planning conference here.
He and other panelists agreed a bypass highway around Campbell River would be a good thing, if handled properly.

NO DEVELOPMENT
Town planner Dieter Naumann said trucking will have a greater rate of expansion than any other kind of traffic passing up-Island over the Island Highway.

He said the alternate route around the built-up area will be effective if district council prevents development along the route.

PARKING PROBLEM
"Development would spoil the traffic capacity of the bypass and also affect present development," he said.

Ted Rashleigh, executive director of the Community Planning Association of Canada, said those wishing to visit Campbell River will not stop if traffic is too heavy and parking is hard to find.

NO EASY PLAN
The panel said over-all town planning is new to the province, and there is no easy plan to follow.

Each community must form its own plan to suit the needs and wishes of the people in it. Mr. Rashleigh outlined steps night.

Mr. Collier said he had received a poor impression of Campbell River on his first visit, and told his audience all must work together to make Campbell River the kind of town they desire.
He said "I am talking to the wrong people here today. The very fact that you are here shows you are interested in the future of your community."

Inquest Set For Girl

NANAIMO — An inquest will open at 4 p.m. today into the death of Lavina Henry, 19, Alert Bay.
The woman was found dead on a bed at a house on Shoreline Drive, Nanaimo Indian reserve.
Coroner Russ Inkster said he had originally planned only an inquiry, but later decided to hold an inquest.
After the viewing of the body this afternoon the jury will adjourn for a week to 10 days. The woman died Saturday night.

Crisp Bills

No Jelly Inside This Box

From the outside, it looked like an ordinary jelly box. Inside were 56 crisp King George III $20 bills.

Lucky receiver was the Salvation Army, which got the $1,120 parcel in its mail Monday.

A return address on the parcel had been scrubbed out. Brig. Ronald Frewing said Tuesday.

The Army doesn't know who the donor was. Police are checking to make absolutely sure the money isn't a relic of some past crime.

The money is still legal currency, and will go toward the Army's Red Shield campaign once it has been checked out.

Hopes Fade For 13 On Fishboat

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The owners of the Newfoundland fishing vessel Blue Mist II said Tuesday night they had abandoned all hope for the safety of the vessel and her crew of 13.

A spokesman for Bonaville Cold Storage Ltd. of St. John's said the company was convinced the vessel had gone down Friday night with 200,000 pounds of fish in her hold.

The spokesman did not elaborate.

A search for the vessel and survivors was to continue today.

SEARCH CONTINUES

An Air-Sea Rescue Centre spokesman here said five aircraft were in the search Tuesday and six or seven would be pressed into the hunt at dawn today.

Meantime, the coast guard ships John A. Macdonald and the Montcalm, the fisheries vessel Cape Freels and Bonaville's trawler Grand Monarch moved to the area, 50 miles off Newfoundland's southwest coast where the lifeboats were spotted.

Atomic About-Face Scored

OTTAWA (CP)—Claiming that he wants to "keep the record straight," Opposition Leader Diefenbaker blistered Defence Minister Hellyer in the Commons Tuesday for changing his mind on nuclear weapons after the United States urged their adoption.

The opposition leader, speaking for the first time during debate of 1965-66 defence spending estimates, said Mr. Hellyer had set himself up as the one man able to see what Canada needs for defence. (See also Page 7).

Because of this, Mr. Diefenbaker said, "a review of some of the statements he made in the past... would not be realistic, because he was just as certain then as he is now."

PRE-ELECTION STAND

Mr. Diefenbaker then proceeded to read portions of Mr. Hellyer's Commons statements made before the 1963 election that saw the Conservative government defeated. Much of the campaign was fought on the nuclear arms issue.

Mr. Hellyer had condemned in 1961 acquisition of the Bomarc nuclear anti-aircraft missile and the Voodoo jet interceptor. Mr. Diefenbaker said. "Then he quoted from a Feb. 4, 1963, Commons debate in which Mr. Hellyer said: '... As of this date I have changed my mind.'"

He referred to newspaper columns telling of how the U.S. ambassador to Canada had briefed reporters on the American view that Canada should accept nuclear weapons under the North American Air Defence Agreement.

"DENY"

"I wonder whether the minister was not one of those students who received the inoculation that brought about the change of viewpoint and heart. I ask him to deny that and say he was not."

They enrolled under age," he told a gaping opposition.

The defence minister gave

not in touch with Mr. (Livingston) Merchant, the United States ambassador.

"He has every opportunity to deny it now, but there will be no denial."

Mr. Hellyer rose and denied the statement.

"I am pointing out the fact that it is a singular circumstance that the minister turned a complete flop from one stand he had spoken of for a period of years and suddenly changed over just at the time the American ambassador was giving defeat of the Conservative government. Mr. Diefenbaker shot back.

Mr. Diefenbaker then read from newspaper articles in April of 1963 in the French-language publication Cite Libre. He said they were written by "the parliamentary secretary to the prime minister"—an obvious reference to Pierre Elliott Trudeau (L—Montreal Mount Royal), a new guard Liberal elected last November.

From an article on the 1963 defeat of the Conservative gov-

LONDON (CP)—Defence Minister Denis Healey triggered the biggest blowup since Labor came to power when he announced Tuesday a reduced role for the Royal Navy in Britain's future defence.

Election talk flew after Healey told the Commons of the Socialist government's decision for purchase of United States warplanes and against construction of a new aircraft carrier.

Admiral Sir David Luce, 60, first sea lord, announced his "early retirement"—tantamount to resignation—following the steps of Navy Minister Christopher Mayhew, 50, who resigned Saturday. A defence department spokesman said there was no known precedent for Sir David's action and certainly none in this century.

Mayhew, in a personal statement to the House, declared that "proposed cuts in resources are

Defence May Sound Retreat by '69

The Great Albatross Hunt

By RON COLLISTER
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The government may kill four albatrosses in one big retreat in defence.

If the plan works out, it will:

- End Canada's air role in Europe by 1968.
- Take out of the front line the Starfighter nuclear-strike plane, which is now considered a "suicide plane" in some European countries.
- Head off the confrontation with French President de Gaulle, due in 1969, over who will command foreign units in France under NATO.
- Put Canada clearly on the road to becoming a non-nuclear nation.

Because it is such a huge, all-encompassing plan, it is called just a possibility in official circles here.

But it has everything going for it.

At present, Canada has six squadrons in Germany and two in France.

The German squadrons are being converted to conventional as well as the nuclear role.

The French squadrons already have a purely reconnaissance role.

The plane is an albatross for the defence department. It was the ideal plane in the first place. But as the project moved along, it was difficult to dump the plane, which was accepted with modifications.

So much money was invested in the project. About $600,000 for the planes, trainers and salaries.

And about a billion dollars to equip it for the whole nuclear strike role, including lengthened runways, nuclear warheads and security.

With such an investment, the program continued, but it was considered an odd role for Canada.

As one reliable source here put it:

"No one liked the role that Canada picked up with the Starfighter."

"It is a role that equipped us to throw big nuclear bombs behind the Iron Curtain."

"But why? U.S. Defence Secretary McNamara says the U.S. has 5,000 tactical nuclear weapons in Europe, and that doesn't include Polaris. Minutes and Strategic Air Command warheads and bombs."

So, however good the pilots are, their role is insignificant compared with the whole nuclear effort.

Canada started with 200 of them.

Russians Buying Peace Proposals

MOSCOW (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson was reported to have urged Soviet leaders Tuesday to help keep the Middle East peaceful and end the Viet Nam War.

British informants said they saw signs of a Kremlin willingness.

In a secret session, the informants said, the British leader advised Soviet Premier Kosygin of his government's decision to withdraw from the Aden base in South Arabia by 1968.

Some countries, Wilson was reported to have suggested, might feel tempted to move into the power vacuum that could develop but it is a shared British-Soviet interest to preserve stability in the area.

This led Wilson to propose establishment of a nuclear-free zone in the Middle East by the big powers, the British sources said.

The underlying implication of Wilson's reported statement was clear.

He was asking the Russians themselves not to take advantage of Britain's withdrawal from Aden but instead to join in using the event as a trial of East-West co-operation in peacekeeping.

On Viet Nam, Wilson was said to have expressed his conviction in the sincerity of U.S. President Johnson's declared wish for peace and warned that continued fighting could turn first into an Asian land war involving China, then a world war.

Kosygin's reaction to Wilson's peace plea on Viet Nam was, on the surface, both orthodox and negative, the sources said.

"And the result will be a strain on the armed forces or dependence on the United States beyond what this House should accept."

This was music in the ears of Tory Opposition Leader Edward Heath, who scoffed at Healey's statement that his defence white paper, which followed a 14-month review, was "essentially an exercise in political and military realism."

"What you are doing is to reduce the amount of the gross national product spent on defence which... does not consider the defence of this country or its position in the world," said Heath.

Power in Uganda All in One Hand

KAMPALA (AP)—Prime Minister Milton Obote announced Tuesday he has assumed "all the powers of the government of Uganda" and arrested five members of his cabinet.

He said from now on he will rule with advice from a council "whose members I shall name later."

The prime minister, 42, said he acted independently and for "the wishes of the people of this country for peace, order and prosperity."

Obote said the five ministers had been "put under detention pending an investigation into their activities."

Reports said the ministers were arrested by a special police paramilitary unit and identified them as Minister of State Grace Ibingira; B. K. Kinyra, minister of water and mineral resources; Health Minister E. B. S. Lumu; Agriculture Minister M. M. Ngobi, and George Magezi, housing and labor minister.

OTTAWA (CP)—The case of the pre-teen soldiers was explained to the Commons Tuesday by Defence Minister Hellyer.

"They enrolled under age," he told a gaping opposition.

The defence minister gave the names of six servicemen who, he said, were all under 13 when they joined between 1926 and 1933.

The question came up during debate on the defence estimates as a result of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's recent report.

Mr. Henderson said the six servicemen retired last year with records that indicated they were 9, 11 or 12 when they joined.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC, Royal) suggested this couldn't be true.

Mr. Hellyer said the minimum enlistment age when they joined was 13 and they had "enrolled under age."

"Like my honorable friend and myself, they must have been big boys," he told Mr. Fairweather. "These people did serve and are entitled to benefits under the law."

Mr. Fairweather said that "as one who enrolled at 17"

he could understand this. But a husky nine-year-old?

Mr. Hellyer identified the six servicemen as Wing Cmdr. W. G. Taylor, Flt. Sgt. J. C. Baker, Lt.-Col. W. M. Alton, Maj. R. W. Hampton, Sgt. D. O. Hodgkinson and Flt. Sgt. C. F. Page. He did not mention their home towns.

Mr. Hellyer said four of the men were approaching their 13th year when they enlisted and one was "almost 10."

Mr. Hellyer asked whether all six couldn't be brought before the house committee on defence, expected to sit shortly, to go into detail on their experience.

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI)—A jury Tuesday night found confessed stranger James C. Cross Jr. guilty of murdering University of Texas coed Susan Rigby and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

The jury deliberated one hour over Cross' sentence after deciding earlier in the evening that he was guilty of the crime and was sane.

Cross, who had remained stoically silent during the trial, broke into a large grin when the sentencing was announced. He shook his head as if to indicate great relief.

Cross, who admitted he strangled Miss Rigby and her college roommate Shirley Ann Stark last summer, shook hands with his lawyers, and then was taken to the county jail by the courtroom to the county jail.

Trade Minister Lofmark warned the opposition Tuesday, in the legislature against further "obstruction," because such moves could become election issues.

He said there is "real concern" among the opposition that there will be an election this year.

"If you want to avoid an election," he told them, "begin supporting this government's policies."

Mr. Lofmark said the federal government should foster the building of a merchant fleet instead of curtailing the shipping industry.

Such curtailment also shackles the exporting industries of Canada, he said.

"Such a fleet is the long arm that renders a country able to reach into markets of the world," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — A 27-year-old psychologist, who describes himself as a "patriotic anti-communist," said Tuesday that he will continue sending tape recordings to radio Hanoi advising U.S. soldiers in Vietnam to "kill themselves from the illegal war."

Ronald Ramsey said the broadcasts urge U.S. troops to re-examine their position in a war he says violates the articles of the Geneva conference.

Ramsey said he made two tapes and said they will be sent to Hanoi despite U.S. government objections.

He did not agree with a federal "discriminatory" policy toward the Vietnamese harbor that made shipping $2,000 to $4,000 more costly than in other ports.

COMPLAINTS JUSTIFIED

Arvid Landell (SC, Revels) took the House that he believes some complaints are justified from people being displaced in his riding by development on the Columbia River.

He said many people accept the authority offers for their land with "resignation" but were unhappy in their hearts.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking birth control pills for three years. I have been told that I should have discontinued them for four months after taking them for two years, and then should have started over again.

What's your advice? — MRS. J. G.

When the pills were first coming into extensive use, some additional precautions were being taken, such as discontinuing them for a time after two years. One of the questions then was whether, after prolonged use, ovulation (and hence the ability to have children) would resume when the pills were stopped.

Now we know the answer to that. Even after prolonged use, ovulation DOES resume. The only way to find the answer to a question like that was to wait and see.

NO NEED TO STOP

By now, use of the birth control pills has continued long enough so we know that there is no need to stop after two years. If you are tolerating the pills satisfactorily, I see no reason for interrupting use of them until you do desire.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you have a diet for stomach ulcers? I also have hemorrhoids.

MRS. W. A.

The way to correct ulcers involves more than just diet although diet is important, too. And you certainly have sympathy since you have both ulcers and hemorrhoids. Still when you understand what the ailments are, and how to handle them, you can take care of them under control and not absolutely always, but most of the time.

The jury, Blackwell said "The facts testify and demand the death penalty," but that life in prison would be "acceptable" if the jurors felt there were mitigating circumstances.

Defence lawyer Charles Burton said the life sentence was "better" than Crooks and his parents had hoped for.

MOTHER OUT

Crooks' mother, who had stayed with her son during the trial, said she was not feeling well, and retired from the courtroom before the verdict was read. His father, however, was present.

Under the newly-passed Texas criminal code, the jury first decided if Crooks was guilty or not guilty, and then heard a "pre-sentencing hearing" before deciding his fate.
